Eighth Army's Retreat Is Halted

House Votes 378 to 20, For Excess Profits Tax

Bill Sent to Senate After Republican Substitute Proposal Is Killed, 252-145

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House last night overwhelmingly approved a 75 percent corporate excess-profits tax, retroactive to July 1, to raise three of the four billion dollars urgently requested by the Administration.

The vote was 378 to 20. The bill now goes to the Senate, where the Finance Committee is holding hearings on a similar measure.

Top-heavy House approval followed rejection of a substitute Republican "combination tax" plan designed to raise 3½ billion dollars.

The Republican motion was defeated by a nearly party-line vote of 252 to 145. Only one Democrat (John F. Kennedy of Mass.) voted for the GOP plan. Eleven Republicans voted against it.

All 20 Representatives who voted against the bill are Republicans. They are Anderson of California, Byrnes of Wisconsin, Clevenger of Ohio, Crawford of Michigan, Jensen of Iowa, Mason of Illinois, Phillips of California, Plumley of Vermont, Reed of Illinois, Reed of New York, Rich of Pennsylvania, Shafer of Michigan, Simpson of Pennsylvania, Smith of Kansas, Smith of Wisconsin, Stockman of Oregon, Taber of New York, Wadsworth of New York, Wilson of Indiana and Woodruff of Michigan.

The landslide passage vote followed, with Republicans, some of whom had just denounced the profits levy as badly drawn and discriminatory, scrambling to go on record in favor of the only tax bill before them.

The bill imposes a 75-percent levy on earnings in excess of 85 percent of a corporation's average earnings during its most profitable three years from 1946 to 1949.

The President had asked a 75-percent tax on earnings in excess of 75 percent of the base period average.

In addition, the House fixed a ceiling of 67 percent on total taxes the Government could collect from any corporation in regular income and profits taxes. The Administration plan had no fixed ceiling.

The bill gives corporations the right to choose an optional excess-profits-tax formula, based on invested capital.

The optional formula allows a 12-percent return before taxes on equity capital and retained earnings under five million dollars; 10 percent on capital be-

Community Chest Drive Pledges at 78.19 Pct. of Goal

The Community Chest Federation announced yesterday it had reached 78.19 percent, or $3,279,934, of the area fund goal of $4,260,000.

Announcement was made by Hugh K. Duffield, general chairman, at a Washington Hotel report luncheon. Community Chest "Oscars" were awarded to 65 persons who had raised 100 percent or more of their quotas.

Charles G. Ross, Truman Aide, Dies at Work in White House

CHARLES G. ROSS
. . . dies at 65

Charles G. Ross, press secretary to President Truman, died at his White House desk yesterday of a heart attack. He was 65.

He had just given reporters a fill-in on the conference of President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee aboard the yacht Williamsburg. Necessarily, there wasn't much he could reveal and he said so.

"I'll tell you in advance," he said, smiling, "that there will be nothing to cause a mad rush for the door."

He then proceeded to describe the luncheon aboard the Williamsburg, laughing as he spelled out such French terms as "au jus" and "bleu." He had been hurrying, and seemed a bit flushed, but otherwise he appeared to be the same "Charlie" Ross of a thousand other press conferences.

The newsmen filed out and Ross prepared to repeat his Williamsburg report for an NBC recording.

Suddenly he fell back in chair. Miss Myrtle Bergheim, his secretary, quickly telephoned Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, the President's physician, in his clinic on the floor below.

Gen. Graham pronounced Ross dead at 5:50 p. m., and said the

Rent Control Extension Bill Blocked by House Rules Unit

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A 90-day Federal rent control extension bill hit an unexpected House Rules Committee blockade late yesterday.

The group voted 6 to 5 to "postpone" action on the measure. It had been recommended earlier in the day by a 17-to-3 vote of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Members immediately speculated that the blockade might break if the Senate should vote favorably on a two-month extension of the Federal ceilings. The vote is scheduled for 2 p. m. Thursday.

At the same time, the Senate District Committee appeared heading for a decision to recommend a one-month extension of the District rent control law without other changes. The straight 28-day continuation received the indorsement yesterday of the Washington Real Estate Board.

District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell will submit recommendations to a special Senate subcommittee today. District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) said both the subcommittee and the full committee may also act today on the local extension bill.

District controls under present law end January 31. The proposed extension would carry them to February 28. Federal control under present law ends December 31 except in communities that vote before then to keep controls through June 30, 1951. The bill in the Senate would push the decontrol date to February 28, and the House bill to March 31.

President Truman asked the three-month extension.

The plan was cleared by the Banking and Currency Committee in a morning meeting. The three votes against were cast by Representatives Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.), Albert M. Cole (R., Kans.) and Donald W. Nicholson (R., Mass.).

When Banking Committee Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) asked the Rules Committee in an afternoon hearing to schedule the measure for House action, a strong challenge was thrown at the plan by Republican and Southern Democrat members of the rules group.

After the Rules Committee vote, Chairman Sabath said another effort may be made today to clear the bill. Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) had scheduled House action for today.

Man, Woman Found in Car Shot to Death

TELEGRAM
40 ARDMORE ROAD
BERKELEY, CALIF.

BOTH YOUR PARENTS DIED TODAY. DECEDENTS REQUEST CREMATION BUT BODIES ARE BEING HELD PENDING YOUR INSTRUCTIONS OR ARRIVAL AND IDENTIFICATION. COMMUNICATE WITH ATTORNEY CHARLES L. WIDMAN, 5800 MASSACHUSETTS AVE. NW. WIRE IMMEDIATE REPLY TO—

A typewritten copy of the above telegram was found on the body of Wilson Delano Clark, 64, who, with a woman believed to be his wife, was found dead in the front seat of an auto near Darnestown, in Montgomery County, Md.

Each had a bullet hole in the right temple. In Clark's right hand, police said, was a .38-caliber revolver.

A note tied to the handle of the car door bore instructions to contact Widman and to seek further information at the Clark apartment at the Alban Towers, 3700 Massachusetts ave. nw.

An Alban Towers clerk, Alexander De Bettencourt, identified them as Mr. and Mrs. Wilson D. Clark, and said they had been living there since June.

Widman identified Clark's body at the Gartner funeral home in Gaithersburg. He said he was not a close acquaintance of the dead man but understood Clark worked somewhere in the Government.

Widman did not know Clark's wife, and police summoned neighbors from the Alban Towers to establish positive identification of the woman. She seemed to be about 50 years old, police said.

Written in ink across the copy of the telegram were the words "written by W. D. Clark."

Visitors Welcome in January

Washington Post Completes Move Into Its New Building

The Washington Post last night completed a month-long, department-by-department move to its new home at 1515 L st. nw.

Effective today, the Post's front counter will operate temporarily in the first floor, east lobby of the new building.

The counter, where classified ads may be left, back papers purchased and subscriptions taken, was the last to move from the old building at 1337 E st. nw.

The paper's mechanical and news departments moved over the weekend of November 12. A week later most of the business departments went into the paper's new home. The executive and personnel offices moved two days ago.

The modern, seven-story newspaper plant will be open to visitors shortly after the first of the year, when the building is finally ready and formally dedicated.

The old Post quarters have been leased to the Federal Government for office space.

U. S. Wastes Manpower, Parley Told

Class Differences Between Adults, Children Blamed By Educator

(Related Stories on Pages B-1, 2)

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The country is wasting "a large proportion" of its human resources in the schools, the armed services and in industry, Dr. Allison Davis, Chicago University professor, said yesterday, and gave this as his reason:

The Nation's teachers come from the middle class and never understand the cultural patterns of the lower class. When these two groups meet, Dr. Davis said, "the teaching process involves at least a 50 percent waste of the children's ability and of the teachers' efforts."

Dr. Davis, in an address to the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth, branded school curricula as "unrealistic and extremely uninteresting" and added:

"The daily effort to teach these uninteresting, memorized materials to children is an experience which would drive most people to the verge of a nervous breakdown—which is where most conscientious teachers seem to be, most of the time."

Based on 20-Year Studies

Dr. Davis explained he was basing his definition of upper, middle and lower class children on studies conducted by social anthropologists over a 20-year period.

The middle-class child, he said, is pressed by his parents to learn too early and fast, but he doesn't have to worry about food, shelter, clothing.

The slum child worries about food, danger of eviction, danger of having too little sleep, of being cold, of being in the dark, he added.

Both groups worry, he said. The middle-class child is more of a thumb-sucker than the lower-class child because of his family's "insistent pressure for early and rapid attainment."

Class Conflict Seen

"Lower class people," said Dr. Davis, "cannot learn middle class foresight and moderation unless they can participate socially with middle class people, whom they may then learn to imitate. So far, the public school is our only chance to teach lower class people the middle class . . . pattern. But the schools do not yet understand how to regard lower class pupils."

Dr. Davis said lower class children have as much intelligence as middle class children, regardless of their former poor showing on standard intelligence tests. He said the trouble with the standard tests is that they are couched in language of which the middle and upper classes have superior knowledge.

He said the only way to increase

No Dunkirk Is Planned, Bradley Says

Removal Reference Limited to Troops In Far Northeast On Way to Beachhead

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Gen. Omar N. Bradley said last night that United Nations troops in the extreme northeast of Korea are moving toward an "evacuation" beachhead, but denied telling Senators that a general "Dunkirk" is planned.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff issued this clarifying statement following publication of accounts of his testimony before a closed-door Senate committee meeting earlier in the day.

They quoted unnamed Senators as saying the general told them that a general evacuation plan has been prepared and that our withdrawals now have made it possible to withdraw from the peninsula, if necessary.

"Any reference I made to evacuation," said Bradley in a formal statement, "was in connection with the hard-pressed troops in the extreme northeast sector which are now moving back to a concentration in a beachhead.

"Any reports other than this are misleading and merely speculation."

Refers to 10th Corps Troops

Aides of the Nation's top military officer said he was referring to troops of the Tenth Corps that have been far up by the border—not the Marines in the Chosin reservoir area.

But Pentagon chiefs have not been as much concerned about the Leathernecks and Seventh Division infantrymen there as those farther to the north. The Marines and infantry form a powerful force that decided to remain at Chosin airstrip until their wounded were evacuated by air and can be expected to fight their way to the coastline even though opposed on most sides by Chinese Red troops.

It is expected that they, too, will be evacuated by sea. Any attempt to join forces with the Eighth Army on the western side of the peninsula by a land march would be difficult because of the rugged mountain range even without the Chinese hordes on their heels.

Could Be Landed Again

These U.N. troops — forming about two divisions — could be landed again in Korea, if it is decided to try to hold a defense line, Pentagon officials said. They insist there is no decision on what to do in Korea and probably will not be until Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, reports on his survey of the situation there.

Bradley's statement:

"There have apparently been conflicting reports circulated on my testimony before an executive and 'off-the-record' session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee this morning. There was

Military Agencies Plan to Hire 218,293 Additional Civilians

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The military agencies plan to hire an additional 218,293 civilian employes under the $16,800,000,000 supplemental budget which the President has recommended to Congress.

The Defense Department last night released the following preliminary estimates of new civilian employes who will be needed for the stepped-up defense program: Army, 132,000; Air Force, 49,000; Navy, 37,000, and the Office of the Defense Secretary, 293.

Between 10,000 and 15,000 of the new jobs would be in and nearby this Capital City.

The preliminary estimates will push the total of new civilian employes earmarked for the military agencies since Korea close to the half-million mark.

OVERSTAFFING: The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee yesterday concluded that 1575 of Treasury's 90,000 employes could be fired with an improvement in its services.

It approved the reports on Treasury and the Bureau of Labor Statistics made by its subcommittee on overstaffing headed by Representative Williams (D., Miss.). Reports on Interior and General Services will be released next week.

The committee suggested that 417 employes in the Treasurer's office; 817 in the Burau of Accounts, and 341 in the Bureau of Public Debt be released. The report also charged gross overstaffing in the Coast Guard, Bureau of Engraving & Printing, and the Deraptment's field service.

Coast Guard's military staff here, it said, was "grossly overgraded." About half of it is composed of admirals, captains and commanders. Some of the high-ranking officers are slated for transfers, it is reported, because of the committee criticism.

The Williams subcommittee made these charges against Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics:

(1) Its cost of living division is grossly overstaffed; (2) the efficiency rating system has been misused in the division; some employes were forced to falsify records by signing erroneous work-progress reports, and (4) employes were threatened with punitive action when they sought relief from the alleged conditions.

Attlee Sees Truman Again On Red Crisis

Discussions Cover 'Steps to Be Taken' In Korean Conflict

President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee resumed their discussion of the grave Korean situation yesterday and considered "steps to be taken to meet it."

No decisions were announced.

The two men and their advisers conferred aboard the presidential yacht Williamsburg while the Nation's capital reverberated with talk of a Far East "Dunkirk." If evacuation of American and Allied forces from Korea was discussed, the fact was a closely guarded secret, along with everything else that was talked about in the yacht's dining room.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, who died of a heart attack a short time later, gave reporters this statement on the Williamsburg conference:

"The President and the Prime Minister held their second meeting of the afternoon on board the Williamsburg. They resumed their discussion of the situation in Korea and of the steps to be taken to meet it.

"There will be a further meeting of the President and the Prime Minister at 11:30 tomorrow (Wednesday) morning at the White House."

Senator Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, who had lucheon aboard the Williamsburg, told newsmen that he had been informed that Mr. Truman and Mr. Attlee had reached a general agreement on all major policy questions.

In this regard, British and American viewpoints never were as far apart as the dispatches from London made it seem last week. The military disaster in Korea has brought them still closer together.

Both governments agree, to begin with, that the United States and its allies must not let themselves get into a major land war against China, at a time when Russia is the greatest danger and when Europe was so weakly defended.

The Administration here has never favored authorizing General MacArthur to bomb Manchuria, and President Truman has said this would have to be a U. N. decision. The British agree with this whole-heartedly.

The only contingency that might lead to a bombing of Manchuria

13 Nations Ask Reds to Halt At Parallel 38

Urgent Plea in U. N. Sent to Wu; Assembly To Get Korean Issue

LAKE SUCCESS, Dec. 5 (AP).—Thirteen Middle Eastern and Asian nation appealed tonight to Communist China and North Korea to refrain from crossing the 38th Parallel in their power drive against U. N. forces in Korea. The appeal pleaded that time be given for consideration of ways to end the crisis in the Orient.

The appeal was transmitted to Wu Hsiu-chuan, head of the Communist Chinese delegation now in New York, with a request that he send it at once to his government at Peiping.

The plea was made by the U. N. delegates of India, Afghanistan, Burma, Egypt, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Pakistan, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia Syria and Yemen. The Indonesian and Afgan delegates joined in the consultation pending instructions from their governments, and added their names to the petition after hearing from their capitals.

The text of the appeal:

"We, on behalf of the delegation (of the 11 countries) to the United Nations, consider it our duty at this critical hour earnestly to appeal to the North Korean authorities and the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China immediately to declare that it is not their intention that any forces under their control should cross to the south of the thirty-eighth parallel.

"Such a declaration will give time for considering what further steps are necessary to resolve the conflict in the Far East, thus helping to avert another world war."

The Asian countries acted as Canada's Lester B. Pearson suggested a cease-fire, Secretary General Trygve Lie called for all-out efforts to settle the crisis, and the steering committee of the U. N. sent the issue to the full Assembly.

Sir Benegal N. Rau of India led the move among the Asian countries to try to stop the fighting. He was joined from the start by Carlos P. Romulo, foreign minister of the Philippines, and Sir Zafrullah Khan, foreign minister of Pakistan.

The top delegates of the Asian countries met today from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., in Rau's Fifth Avenue apartment and discussed what to do. They adjourned during the afternoon to consult their Youth, 16, Confesses Rape, Assault Attempt in N.W.

A 16-year-old schoolboy last night confessed to the rape of a teen-age girl November 20 and to the attempted rape of a married woman Monday night, police said.

Inspector Robert V. Murray, chief of detectives, said the arrest followed questioning of more than 100 men in the neighborhood of the sex assaults, the 1300 block of Sheridan st. nw. and the 6000 block of 13th pl. nw.

The youth, who lives in the central part of the city, worked in the section, police reported.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, commended Lieut. Richard F. McCarty and McCarty's sex squad on the arrest.

Inspector Murray said the youth admitted, in the presence of Monday night's victim, that he attacked, stripped and attempted to rape her. He also admitted taking $45 from her.

The woman, police said, was attacked near her residence in the 6000 block of 13th pl. nw. She is the wife of a Fort Myer sergeant.

McCarty assigned sex squad police to canvass the neighborhood of the first attack.

Tenth Corps Still Faces China Reds' Trap Threat

Collins Says Force In Northwest Korea Remains Capable of Taking Care of Itself

TOKYO (Wednesday), Dec. 6 (AP).—The United States Eighth Army, still a fighting force, today awaited the vanguards of a one million-man Chinese Communist army from a new defense line in northwest Korea.

It had halted its retreat from Pyongyang toward the 38th parallel. But there was no retreat yet for 30,000 United States troops trapped in northeast Korea where appearance of Red forces close to the coast increased the peril.

A tempered note of optimism for the northwestern situation was voiced by Gen. J. Lawton Collins, United States Army Chief of Staff.

"I think the Eighth Army is capable of taking care of itself," he said after a flying front-line inspection Tuesday.

Asked at a news conference in Seoul whether the atomic bomb would be of worthwhile tactical use in Korea, the Chief of Staff replied:

"Virtually not, from what I saw yesterday (Tuesday)."

Site of New Lines Secret

Precisely where the Eighth Army has set up its new lines was a carefully guarded military secret.

Associated Press Correspondent Don Huth said he saw large United Nations convoys move south of the 38th parallel which is 70 miles south of Pyongyang.

A possible suggestion that it was a defense line in depth came in reports from the field. These told of North Korean guerillas being driven out of positions along commanding ridges and hills north of the 38th. South Koreans also were reported to have built other defense positions south of the parallel.

In that area the main roads and railroads are commanded by rough, hutting hills suitable for artillery and other defensive works.

Already the Chinese were in abandoned Pyongyang, where Allied air attacks dealt them deadly blows. Approximately 2500 Reds were killed by air action there Tuesday, U. S. Fifth Air Force headquarters reported.

Patrols Moving Out

But patrols moving out from the new Eighth Army defense line reported few contacts beyond minor skirmishes.

A Defense Department spokesman said that on the northeast front the Chinese Reds pushed a spearhead eastward and cut the main highway between the two major east coast ports of Hungnam and Wonsan.

Wonsan is headquarters of the United States Tenth Corps. Hungnam, port for the industrial city of Hamhung, is about 50 air miles north of Wonsan. It serves as the supply center for chopped-up segments of the United States First

Raid Warning Net To Take 2½ Years

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporters

Even if the lame duck Congress passes the Administration's civil defense bill, it will take until mid-1953 to set up completely a national air raid warning net to alert the public in case of enemy attack.

This was disclosed yesterday by James J. Wadsworth, acting civil defense boss, in talking to reporters after appearing before a House Armed Services Subcommittee.

He said that:

1. Congress will be asked soon for 83 million dollars to get the proposed Civil Defense Administration started this fiscal year. Former Florida Gov. Millard F. Caldwell, jr., is slated to head the agency. President Truman has allocated one million dollars from his emergency fund as a beginning. The agency will have about 200 employes by next June 30 and up to 3000 by the end of 1954.

Stockpiling Equipment

2. Much of the 83 million dollars would go for stockpiling medical and engineering supplies and to buy communications equipment, including air raid sirens. Construction of air raid shelters, estimated to cost $2250 million, would be over a three-year period beginning next July 1. More money would have to be voted next year by Congress and the States since they would split the shelter costs.

3. Speed of purchase of air raid sirens and the necessary networks to pass the alerts received from the Air Force along to civil defense workers and the public will depend on how hard the equipment will be to get. Wadsworth said he expects the National Production Authority to grant priorities but even then it will take until mid-1935 to complete the job.

4. Cities which go ahead and buy warning and communication equipment on their own—such as Washington is about to do—probably won't be reimbursed for the cost. But the more laggard among cities and States will have the whole bill paid for by Congress.

5. Lehigh University has contracted to make a $150,000 study of air raid shelter construction for the Army Engineers. Actual field tests will be made later. Both family and communal type shelters are being studied.

Wadsworth told the Congressmen that the "urgency is very great" and that "if the cities and States don't get started now it may very well be too late."

The civil defense program, calling for $1675 million in Federal funds and $1430 million by the States and municipalities, got a mixed reception on the Hill although it does appear to stand a good chance of passage at the lame duck session. Much appears to depend on the Korean war and the general world situation.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee told reporters that "We've got to pass it." He sat in on the subcommittee hearings conducted by Representative Carl T. Durham (D., N. C.). The hearings will continue at 10 a. m. Thursday.

On the Senate side, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) of the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee in charge of the bill, said he expects Congress to pass both the authorization and multibillion-dollar appropriation at this session. Hearings will get under way at 2:30 this afternoon with Wadsworth as a witness.

Officials of the American Municipal Association, meeting here in annual congress, are expected to testify and ask for quick action on the bill. DeLesseps S. Morrison, Mayor of New Orleans, said yesterday he expects to suggest combining bomb shelters with parking garages, as he hopes to do in his city. He talked yesterday with Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials about a proposed three million-dollar loan for that purpose.

Wadsworth Speaks Today

Wadsworth also is scheduled to address a luncheon of the city officials today. They are meeting at the Hotel Statler. He was due to go to Chicago for a Thursday meeting with State civil defense directors but canceled the trip to go back before the House committee.

Col. Barnet W. Beers, civil defense liaison officer at the Pentagon, told the House committee yesterday the armed forces are in "general accord" with the civil defense plan. They will submit a detailed report in a few days.

Representative Charles H. Elston (R., Ohio), who was critical of many parts of the proposed civil defense bill, wanted to know why a separate civil defense communications network was necessary. He asked why commercial radio stations couldn't be used to alert the public.

Colonel Beers said that there is "no existing system competent to alert the public." He added that the military may order commercial stations to shut down in case of raids because enemy planes can use them as "homing devices," that is, follow their beams to the target city.

Wadsworth said that the Civil Defense Administration would have a national communications center somewhere in the Washington area, linked to all the States and cities.

. . . Marine dies of wounds

The parents of a Marine Corps captain were notified yesterday that their son had died of wounds received in the Korean fighting.

Capt. Paul N. Storaasli, 32, son of Col. and Mrs. Gynther Storaasli, 1707 Sherwood rd., Silver Spring, Md., died November 29. He was previously wounded in Korea and had returned to the fighting a few days before his death.

He was born in San Francisco and lived with his parents at various Army posts. He left the University of Minnesota to enter Naval aviation, becoming a transport pilot with the Marine Corps. Two years ago he transferred to the ground forces. In Korea he was assigned to the First Regiment of the First Marine Infantry Division.

The captain's wife, Mrs. Janet G. Storaasli, and their two sons live in Seattle, Wash.

Colonel Storaasli, a retired Army chaplain, has lived in Washington for two years. Since his retirement he has been with the National Lutheran Council.

Taft Demands That Truman Give Nation More Information on Affairs in Asia, Europe

By The Associated Press

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) demanded yesterday that President Truman give his fellow citizens "more information" on what the Nation faces, both in Asia and Europe.

The policy leader of the Senate Republicans proposed that Mr. Truman report to the people after he finishes his curent talks with British Prime Minister Attlee.

Taft complained that the Republican lawmakers are not now being consulted in advance of Administration decisions, but are merely being filled in on developments after they ocur.

He said the President and other Administration leaders ought to "state what the problems are" so the public will have a sound basis for decisions.

Taft spoke out after an hour-long meeting of the Republican Policy Committee which he heads. When he was asked whether he was proposing that Mr. Truman make a radio broadcast on the world situation, he answered:

"I'm not telling him about the method or mechanics."

Taft said the GOP Policy Committee probably would meet "every two or three days while things are so hot."

One of his Republican colleagues, Senator Wiley of Wisconsin, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, was invited to sit in on a Truman-Attlee luncheon conference on the yacht Williamsburg. Senator Connally, Democratic chairman of the Foreign relations group, also was invited, as were House Speaker Rayburn, Senator George (D., Ga.) and Representatives Eaton (R., N. J.) and Richards (D., S. C.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

As evidence of public concern over the current situation, Taft showed reporters a six-inch stack of telegrams he had received in the past few days. He said some of the messages demanded the ouster of Secretary of State Acheson and "even ouster of the whole State Department."

Meanwhile Senator Malone (R., Nev.), a frequent and caustic critic of the Administration's foreign policy, issued a statement contending that Atlee came to Washington to protect British and French colonial investments in the Far East, and that Britain and France want "to sell out the American Army in Korea."

Malone predicted that Attlee will suggest the war in Korea be ended "by surrendering, after getting a concession or two," and he added:

"I prophesy now that we will do exactly what England and France tell us to do, for we still have officials without the backbone to stand up to European leaders."

In a Senate speech, Senator Eastland, Mississippi Democrat, unfolded his ideas for turning the Korean setback into victory.

With Chinese Communist troops massed in Korea, he said, there is "a perfect opening for the launching of a second front on the Chinese mainland" by Chinese Nationalist forces based on Formosa.

Aided by American air and sea power, Eastland said, the Chinese Nationalists, picking up guerilla assistance, could "march northward to balance off the Communist troops in Manchuria, thus catching them in the very trap they had set for us."

Eastland called for general mobilization in this county, and urged that the Nation be placed on a war footing.

Ives Asks GOP Move To Oust Acheson

Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) last night proposed concerted demand by Republican Senators that President Truman remove Secretary of State Acheson immediately.

Ives, who supported Acheson's confirmation two years ago, declared the Secretary of State had now lost the "confidence" of both the Congress and the country.

Suez Director Named

LONDON, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee has nominated Sir Alexander Cadogan, former British United Nations delegate, as government director of the Suez Canal Co., it was announced tonight. Cadogan will succeed the Earl of Cromer, who is retiring.

City Officials Hear Douglas Urge Use of Chiang's Forces

Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) last night called for drastic action in Korea: The immediate use of Nationalist China forces and greater manpower contributions from France and Britain.

He suggested the atom bomb should be used against purely military forces if we have no other effective weapon to stem "the most crushing military defeat in the history of the United States."

Douglas added further that the United States should treat the next aggressive move of a Russian satellite as an act of war and "release such power as we have on Russia itself."

The World War II Marine officer's strongly-worded demands for action to save Korea were made before 600 mayors and city officials of 44 States and Territories at a conference of the American Municipal Association.

Douglas, who admitted he previously had been uncertain about use of Chiang Kai-shek's forces, said "We need every bit of aid we can get. They are anti-Communist. We should use them and use them as speedily as we can."

He asked how the British and French can expect Americans to sacrifice their lives for them, if the people of the two nations are not willing to contribute men to stop the spread of Communism.

The use of the atom bomb against a soldier is no more immoral than killing with a rifle, Douglas said. "If it is militarily possible and we have no other effective weapon we should not be restrained from using the atom bomb against opposing military forces," he stated.

He made it clear that his conception of the bomb's use was solely against military forces—not civilians nor civilian-occupied cities.

Douglas called the march of Chinese Communists into Korea a Russian-directed act and stated that an American withdrawal from Asia would soon allow the Russian Communists to dominate the entire continent.

The wave of defeatism that would follow Communist domination of Asia would spread to Europe, he said, and would "demoralize those countries now resisting Russia."

He called for an immediate war economy, and the establishment of a six million-man armed force, even though this will require an added expenditure of at least 40 billion dollars a year.

Senate Group Approves DiSalle As Prices Guardian

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee yesterday unanimously recommended favorable action on the confirmation of Michael V. DiSalle for the post of Price Administrator in the Economic Stabilization Agency.

DiSalle, who will resign as mayor of Toledo, appeared before the committee, but since he has just been named to the job and has had no experience with it, he was not extensively pressed for his views by the Senators.

Collins Sees No Use For A-Bomb in Korea

Very Effective
Marines Use 'Proximity' Bombs by Air

ON THE NORTHEAST KOREAN FRONT, Dec. 5 (AP)—Marine Corsair planes have used the deadly proximity-fuse bombs for the first time in the Korean war with "outstanding" results, it was disclosed today.

A spokesman for the First Marine air wing said the proximity fuse, detonating the bomb before it hits the ground, was particularly effective against enemy troops in foxholes.

Fragmentation is murderous, and troops caught directly below the blast are killed by concussion, he said.

Allied Pilots Kill 2000, Many Crossing River

UNITED STATES FIFTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Dec. 5 (AP).—Allied warplanes killed an estimated 2000 Chinese Reds today in assaults on Communists striking for abandoned Pyongyang.

Maj. Gen. Earle E. Partridge said F-80 jet fighters killed "a great many of them attempting to ford the ice-filled Taedong River north of the former Red Korean capital.

A spokesman said air power was turning "the Pyongyang area into a death trap for the Chinese Communist."

Flights of light bombers pounded Pyongyang's railroad yards to destroy materiel left intact by hastily withdrawing U. N. forces Monday.

The new estimate of Chinese wiped out on the northern approaches to Pyongyang was in addition to 2100 Communists reported killed by warplanes Monday. Another 2000 were estimated killed Saturday and Sunday.

The Far East Air Forces announced the Monday figure for all of North Korea, including heavy strafing and fire-bombing of Chinese besieging United States Marines and doughboys in the Changjin area.

B26s of the 452d light bombardment wing, flying from Japan bases, rained fragmentation bombs on Reds in the Changjin area.

SEOUL, Korea (Wednesday), Dec. 6 (AP).—Gen. J. Lawton Collins, U. S. Army Chief of Staff, said today he could see no worthwhile tactical use of the atom bomb in Korea.

Collins refused to amplify his statement.

The general declined comment on the military situation in Korea other than to say "an entirely new situation has developed" since the Chinese Communists entered the war.

The Chief of Staff made a flying inspection of the northwestern front where the U. S. Eighth Army was in retreat.

Asked whether correspondents were giving the American public an accurate picture of the critical situation in Korea, Collins replied:

"You're giving an excellent picture of the situation, and quite realistic."

He said he had received "very fine reports on the British and Turkish troops. They gave an excellent account of themselves, which was no more than we expected."

Collins was accompanied to today's news conference by Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the Eighth Army.

Correspondents asked what effect it would have on the American Army if the Eighth Army's four American combat divisions were enveloped by the Chinese.

Collins replied, "I think the Eighth Army is capable of taking care of itself."

General Walker smiled broadly and seemed to do a little jig as Collins said that.

The Chief of Staff was asked whether there was a plan for a single field commander in Korea.

"I don't know," he answered.

At present, the Tenth Corps in the northeast and the Eighth Army in the northwest operate independently of each other.

Asked whether the atom bomb would be of tactical use in Korea, Collins said: "Virtually not, from what I saw yesterday."

Collins said he had been impressed by the orderliness of the retreat he had seen. Morale was high among troops he had seen, he added.

The Chief of Staff visited Tuesday with Maj. Gen. William B. Kean of the United States Twenty-fifth Division and Maj. Gen. F. W. Milburn of the First Corps. Collins said his plane trip took him just short of the Communist capital of Pyongyang, once again in the hands of the Reds.

General Collins planned to visit Maj. Gen. Edward Almond, commander of the Tenth Corps, before flying back to Tokyo late tonight. In Tokyo he will meet with General MacArthur.

Korea Retreat Is Called Sad History for U. S. Marines

By Marguerite Higgins

WITH THE UNITED STATES MARINES AT CHANGJIN RESERVOIR, Korea, Dec. 5 (NYHT). In the center of a scenic-like plateau, bruised United States Marines who only yesterday broke out of encirclement braced to fight through a new enemy wall blocking their way to the sea coast.

In the ice-covered field in front of his tent, Lieut. Col. Ray Murray of San Diego, Calif., commander of the Fifth Marine Regiment, gathered his key men. As they stood in the swirling snow, he told them grimly: "We're gonna get out of here. Any officer here who doesn't think so will kindly go lame and be evacuated, but I don't expect any bites for that offer."

Taking stock of the ordeal in the Changjin reservoir trap, Colonel Murray said: "I'm afraid we are all a part of a sad piece of history. A withdrawal on this scale is certainly something new in Marine Corps history. But I believe we are one of the first outfits in this war to come out—as a unit—of such a trap (they were encircled by an estimated two Chinese Communist divisions). We didn't come out as stragglers. We came out as Marines. We did not leave behind a single wounded man that I know of or a piece of intact equipment. And that is the way we are going to fight our way out to the coast."

From Hagaru Plateau to the Hamhung area, it is 60 torturous walking miles over steep roads. The dirt trails wind through purple snow-capped mountains that rise suddenly and steeply from the coastal plain.

From the air we could see thousands of foxholes dug into the mountain ridges dominating the escape trails leading to the plateau. High snow-capped mounds marked hundreds of gun emplacements. Our pilot, Capt. Paul C. Fritz of Muskogee, Okla., who was making his eleventh trip to the reservoir, said: "I see the traces all over the maintains. But I've never seen a Chinaman in the daytime. But at dawn and dusk they start shooting at us."

Today the Marines hold the main ridges encircling the Hagaru plateau at the tip of the Changjin reservoir, but all the rest of the country on all sides is occupied, Capt. Fritz said, by enemy troops.

"See that hill?" the pilot said, pointing to a ridge within rifle range of the field. "Well, that has changed hands three times in the last two days. We have it now."

At Hagaru I went at once in search of the Fifth Marine Regiment. I was not prepared for the spirit shown and the physical mauling the Marines had taken. Their pride especially was hurt. They seemed to reason somewhat like this: "Retreat may happen to the Army, but how did the United States ever get in such a predicament as to let this happen to the Marines?"

Everywhere I heard from officers and men: "If we only had more troops, we could have licked them. We were stacking them up 30 to 1, but that wasn't enough."

Their long trek was a bloody journey, where frostbite sometimes claimed 50 percent of a company.

Lieut. Col. John Stevens of La Jolla, Calif., observed: "I saw a man take off his boot this morning and the whole bottom of his foot ripped off. These shoepacs just aren't cut out for below-zero weather like this. The men's feet sweat in the rubber of the shoes and then the sweat freezes. Then they are done for."

The ordeal began on November 27 in the Changjin, reservoir area as the Fifth and Seventh Marine Regiments began their part of the "end-the-war" offensive. The Chinese counter-attacked in force that night and the fight for survival and for an exit down the narrow valley was on. Temporary respite came on December 3 and the morning of December 4, when the Marines, pursuing tactics much like those of the pioneers against the Indians, crossed the snowy pass onto the Hagaru plateau. Here they linked up with other Marine units, as well as with a British commando unit which had fought its way up to the reservoir area with heavy losses. When they reached the plateau, with its natural ring of defenses and bulldozer air strip, the Marines had fought without halt for four days and four nights.

A battalion commander said: "If we seemed dazed it is because most of us never thought we would still be alive."

Pfc. Richard Bolde of New Palz, N. Y., said: "It was like a mousetrap. The Chinese let us in, but they wouldn't let us out."

Lieut. Col. Joseph Stewart, executive officer of the Fifth Regiment, told how at the final roadblock the lead battalion was told "to attack at any cost."

"Finally," Colonel Stewart said, "the battalion commander messaged back that he was losing men fast and that he needed support and relief. I ordered him for the second time to attack at any cost, and now he is reduced to two undersized companies, but that attack made it possible for us to break through the pass. I'd have to send the same message again, wouldn't I?"

Britain Puts RAF, Army Ahead of Navy

LONDON, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Britain shoved its once mighty fleet into third priority today and announced it was building a bigger army and an air force equipped with the latest jet fighter planes.

An official statement said Britain will boost the army and air force by 83,000 men by spring, bringing the total armed strength to 899,900.

Supplementary estimates, covering the period until March next year, said the army will be increased by 55,000 and that the new army will total 522,000. The estimates said the air force will be increased by 28,000, bringing RAF strength to 243,000.

Naval strength, which has been declining since start of the Korean war, will remain at 134,900.

Shrinkage of the navy already has caused concern in Britain, and the cabinet's navy spokesman was asked to answer questions in the House of Commons Wednesday on this decline that has forced the bulk of the world naval patrol on the expanding United States Navy.

Australia to Strengthen All Branches of Services

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Australian cabinet ministers and defense chiefs, openly alarmed by the Korean disaster, decided at an urgent meeting today to strengthen all branches of the armed services and especially the air force, reliable sources said tonight.

There was no doubt that Australia, at least, shared the United States view that the possibility of a Russian attack in Europe must not blind the Allied powers to the immediate danger in Asia.

One newspaper said bluntly that Australia's existence depended not on the "platitudes" of Western European spokesmen like Prime Minister Clement Attlee but "on the determination of the United States to see that communism does not engulf Asia and the Pacific."

It was understood that the government, as the result of today's cabinet-service chiefs, might soon ask the United States and Britain to sell this country warplanes to strengthen the Royal Australian Air Force which is fighting in Korea under Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Prime Minister Robert Gordon Menzies summoned the service chiefs to the cabinet meeting. After the meeting he said:

"There is no doubt that the international situation is extremely grave. I do not say that in a scare sense. . . . But nobody can consider the groupings and position in Korea without realizing that the problem is more acute, and the danger more real than at any time since the end of the war."

4000 Civilians In Indo-China Set for Flight

SAIGON, Indo-China, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—More than 4000 American, French and British civilians in North Indo-China's embattled Tonkin Province packed belongings today, ready for the flight south, away from the menace of Communist Viet Minh troops

Twenty American missionaries and government employes in Tonkin, including seven women and children, are among those to be evacuated in the next few days by United States Air Force planes.

The French, who left a choice with the men, but ordered women and children to leave, prepared a special airlift from Saigon to Hanoi, Tonkin's capital.

French civilian high commissioner Leon Pignon ordered the evacuation yesterday.

It was believed Ho Chi Minh's rebels will launch a violent southward attack when the Honsoon season begins. The French air force will be weather-bound during the storms.

Marines Fall in With Reds, Shoot Them, Flee

NORTHEAST FRONT, Korea, Dec. 5 (UP)—If you can't lick 'em, join 'em.

A U. S. Marine told today how he and two unidentified companions fell in with attacking Chinese Communists, marched with them through the night and picked them off at dawn. Pfc. Oscar J. Kessler, of Petersburg, Va., member of Company D of the Seventh Marine Regiment, was one of the three men.

"We were the first one hit by the Chinks," he said. "What was left of the company was on its own when we decided to rest for the night. I was manning a machinegun when they hit us about 1 or 2 in the morning. The fight lasted only an hour, they overran us so fast."

"Somehow I found myself with two riflemen. We saw a squad of Chinks moving across the crest of a hill so we decided to fall in with it. We figured we could kill the 12 or 14 of them if we were spotted.

"Just before dawn when the faintest flicker of light came up the guy in front of me turned around. Before he could open his mouth I put a bullet through his belly. The riflemen shot the guys in front of them and we ran off as fast as we could. The Chinks were so surprised they didn't open fire until we had a good start."

West Germans Dispute Soviet Prisoner Claim

BONN, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—West Germany tonight disputed Russia's claim that repatriation of German war prisoners has been completed and challenged Moscow to explain the whereabouts of nearly 1,300,000 missing soldiers and "millions" of civilians.

The Bonn government set forth its position in an 11-page memorandum to be submitted to the United Nations.

Executive Officer of A-Project Loses Life in Korea Conflict

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 5 (AP).—Col. Earl H. Marsden, 43, who served as executive officer of the Manhattan Engineer District which developed the atomic bomb, has been killed in Korea, it was learned today.

Colonel Marsden was one of a group of engineers and scientists who originally went to Oak Ridge, Tenn., to start the atomic plant there. He had been in Korea since the Inchon landing in October.

A graduate of Yale's Sheffield scientific school, Marsden has been in miltary service since the start of World War II except for a brief period at the end of the war. In civilian life he was a construction engineer.

14,138 Korea Casualties Are Airlifted to Safety

TOKYO, Dec. 5 (AP)—The United States Far East Air Force Combat Cargo command has airlifted 14,138 war and weather casualties from Korea in the past eight days.

Lieut. Col. Allen D. Smith, of Decatur, Ga., the command's acting chief of medical air evacuation, said today that from the Tenth Corps airstrip at Hagaru alone 2651 persons were evacuated in the past four days.

Smith said his flight nurses and medical air technicians had been working around the clock since November 27, taking care of sick and wounded.

Chevy Chase Pilot Aids Pursuit of Enemy Jets

UNITED STATES FIFTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Dec. 5. (AP)—Two Communist MIG-15 jet fighter planes were chased back across the Yalu river by United States F-80 jets today after a brief air battle near Kanggye.

"The MIGS came out of the sun at about 500 miles an hour," said Lieut. James W. Smith of New Albany, Ind., pilot of one F-80.

He said they made a shooting pass at the F-80s, which were carrying 500-pound bombs for bombing missions.

Other American pilots in the fight were Lieut. Ralph S. Parr, jr., Chevy Chase, Md.; Lieut. William F. Casey, Claymont, Del.; and Lieut. Edward R. Drummond, Philadelphia, Pa.

Marine Division and Seventh Infantry Division, making a fighting withdrawal some 50 miles to the northwest.

General MacArthur's headquarters reported three more Chinese Red divisions were ready to reinforce the seven divisions already smashing through Korea's frigid northeast icebox.

This swelled the total number of Chinese Reds in the northeast to about 100,000 men.

MacArthur's war summary spoke ominously of a "rising tempo" of road and rail movements behind Chinese lines in Korea. U. S. planes attacked a 30-mile-long convoy north of Changjin Reservoir in the northeast while farther north they hit a large body of troops hauling guns and supplies.

The U. N. commander said a "maximum effort" was under way to resupply and reinforce the already mammoth Chinese forces committed to battle.

Nevertheless Communist troops occupied Pyongyang Airfield at 10 a. m. Tuesday (8 p. m. Monday, E.S.T), said an Eighth Army spokesman. This was only eight and a half hours after the last United States combat cargo command plane flew out for Seoul.

Pyongyang itself was covered by a pall of smoke as the first Reds returned to the old Korean Communist capital. The city was given up by the Reds after token resistance on October 20.

Move South Is Rapid

This time U. N. forces were rolling south across the thirty-eighth parallel as fast as their bumper-to-bumper convoys could move over dust-obscured roads.

Preparations also were made to remove 200 American civilian personnel from Seoul, the Republic of Korea capital.

The Eighth Army was strung out along 165 dusty road miles between Pyongyang and Seoul.

Correspondent Don Huth, who accompanied Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker's army by jeep, said the retreat ended somewhere south of the thirty-eighth parallel with the Army moving into new positions. Seoul is about 30 air miles below the thirty-eighth parallel.

Flakes of snow bit through the dust, and blinded the vision of the retreating men. Traffic snarls slowed their progress and rubbed nerves raw.

Huth described it as the greatest retreat for an American army in modern times.

In Seoul itself, Correspondent O. H. P. King reported some military men thought the Seoul-Inchon area could be held. One officer declared:

"Such heavy losses could be inflicted on the enemy by artillery and air that his hope of sweeping the peninsula would be completely smashed."

Korean civilians in Seoul were less confident. One civic official declared that "something outside Korea right now must come to our rescue if we are to stay."

On the critical northeast front Marine Corsairs employed deadly proximity fuse bombs for the first time in the war. The bombs explode about 30 feet above the ground and play havoc with troops in foxholes.

The air attacks, however, could not stem the Reds, who attacked in strength at nightfall Tuesday against United States Third Division elements 17 miles northwest of Hamhung.

There were no immediate details of the action. United States troops called for an air strike on their attackers, a field dispatch said.

Thousands of civilian refugees were on the move south from the battlefront toward Hamhung.

Still farther south more refugees moved toward the port of Wonsan.

Strong elements of the United States First Marine Division were cut off at Hagaru at the southern tip of Changjin reservoir where the Fifth and Seventh regiments have consolidated with remnants of the Seventh Infantry Division.

Smaller Marine units were cut off at Koto, 6 miles south of Hagaru.

At Koto, 28 air miles northwest of Hamhung, Correspondent Tom Stone said Marines of the First Regiment and doughboy units were surrounded by "overwhelming forces of a determined enemy."

Between them and survival was a narrow, frozen mountain road. In the snow-covered hills on either side the Chinese lay in wait for a dash for freedom.

Puller Sees Heavy Losses

The commanding officer of the First Marine Regiment, Col. Lewis Puller, told Stone:

"We will suffer heavy losses. The enemy greatly outnumber us. They have blown bridges and blocked the roads.

"Our vehicles may not get through, but we will make it somehow . . ."

Besides the trapped Marines, Seventh Division soldiers, and the United States Third Division—all under attack—the United States Seventeenth Regimental Combat Team and the Republic of Korea Capital and Third Divisions are included in the Tenth Corps.

There still was no word from the Seventeenth, which had been ordered to withdraw from Hyesanjin on the Manchurian border several days ago. Unless airlifted, the Seventeenth faces a retreat through 7000-foot mountain passes, desolate snowy wastes and rocky gorges for more than 100 miles to the port of Iwon. The route is infested with enemy troops.

On the far northeast coast the South Korean Capital Division, last reported within 40 miles of the Siberian border, had the supporting big guns of the Cruiser St. Paul to cover its retirement.

There was no fresh word of this division nor of the ROK Third Division farther south.

The Far East Air Force flew 302 sorties Tuesday in close support of the ground forces. Marine and Navy planes also hit hard in the northeast.

B26 light bombers pounded the railroad yards at Pyongyand to destroy war materiel left behind in the U. N. retreat from that political prize.

Other bombers hurled fragmentation and demolition bombs at Koksan on the east flank of the retreating Eighth Army, touching off 13 separate fires.

Enemy troops had been reported in the Koksan area, which would pose a new flanking threat. But later advices said the Koksan force was made up entirely of guerillas.

Attlee Parley Conduct Approved by Churchill

'Dunkirk' Plan Is Denied; Some GIs Head for Beachhead

no record of the testimony taken because of the military security involved.

"One report seems to indicate that I had stated that a 'Dunkirk' plan is set, and that the withdrawals by United Nations troops have now made it possible to evacuate them if the defense line cannot be held in Korea. Any reference I made to evacuation was in connection with the hard-pressed troops in the extreme northeast sector, which are now moving back to a concentration in a beachhead.

"Any reports other than this are misleading and merely speculation."

A spokesman also denied that there has been any plan or decision to "reinvade Korea after pulling out," as reported from London.

One factor affecting any decision to withdraw from Korea is our ability to evacuate the sizable forces in the face of enemy opposition. There is a shortage of ports and probably of sea and air lift which would make the job difficult if it has to be done soon and in a few days' time.

The major consideration arguing for evacuation is the prime need for getting the bulk of America's land fighting forces out for use elsewhere. It was one thing to commit such an army for what appeared to be a short campaign against the North Koreans and another to tie them down in an endless and perhaps catastrophical battle with China's huge army. On the other hand, the desire to stabilize a defensive position while peace negotiations go on might override this view.

Meanwhile, Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) urged on the floor that a "second front" be opened against the Chinese Communists by landing Nationalist troops from Formosa on the mainland, that the American Navy blockade China's coast and U. S. air power bomb industrial cities.

"If such a plan were undertaken now," he said, "the guerilla potential of Southern China would join forces with Chiang Kai-shek and would march northward to balance off the Chinese Communist troops in Manchuria, thus catching them in the very trap that they have set for us."

And in another development, members of the House Armed Services Committee said that there may be another supplemental military spending bill presented to Congress. They spoke after hearing Assistant Secretary of Defense Wilfred McNeil testify behind closed doors. Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said "no ceiling has been placed" on current defense spending.

Chinese Gen. Ma Dead, Peiping Radio Says

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Chinese Communist radio at Peiping today announced the death of Gen Ma Chan Shan, an outstanding Nationalist leader in the fight against Japanese conquest of Manchuria. He was 63.

The report said only that Ma had died November 29. When the Japanese conquered Manchuria in 1931, Ma apparently capitulated to them and was named minister of defense for the puppet state. He later escaped, reorganized his forces on the Soviet border, and denounced Japanese intrigues.

Cloister Rules Eased To Let Nuns Work

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Vatican authorities said today that rules of cloister for Roman Catholic convents had been eased to permit nuns to engage in many outside activities and work.

The new rule will permit the nuns to leave their convents and engage in such work as operating clinics and hospitals, institutes, schools, rest homes and even printing plants. A Vatican report said "today the nuns cannot live any longer on the fruit of their own means and, on the other hand, the charity of the faithful has diminished greatly."

Married 13 Days, Battling Carters Call It Quits

BALTIMORE, Dec. 5 (AP).—Sylvan and Violet Carter, whose lovers' spats caused them to tear up five licenses before they finally got married, have decided after 13 days of marriage they are not "meant for each other."

Blonde, 18-year-old Violet Bull Carter has gone to home to mother. And Sylvan says he will join the Royal Canadian Air Force. They plan a divorce.

The former Danville (Va.) youth said today, "We fought all the time. She comes from Lynch, in Harlan County, Ky., where they're supposed to be tough, but she just couldn't take it.

"I got a brother married to a Harlan County girl, and they fight all the time. But she can take it."

U. S. Stops 4 China-Bound 'War' Cargoes

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 5 (U.P.). In a general crackdown on shipments for Communist China, the United States Government ordered four ships at West Coast docks today to unload steel and other cargo.

The Government cracked down on shippers under new restrictions intended to keep war cargoes from reaching Chinese ports.

Most important of the four shipments halted was 22 tons of Belgian-made silicon steel bound for Tientsin, China, aboard the Norwegian motorship Igadi.

United States Customs Collector Paul Leake said the steel would have to be removed before the ship, scheduled to have sailed from Oakland, Calif., last night, could depart.

Agents for Igadi, Balfour, Guthrie and Co., said it would take four days and an expense of $15,000 to remove the steel. The agents offered to post a $25,000 bond guaranteeing that the steel would be returned to San Francisco.

But the Government rejected the proposition. "These are not ordinary times," Leake said. "We must take every legal precaution to protect this country."

Another Norwegian ship, the Greta Maersk, was forced to unload cargo at San Francisco, and a third, the Chastine Maersk, at Richmond, Calif.

The Government objected to these shipments because they had not been licensed. Shipping officials, unaware of the Government's new bans, loaded freight for Hongkong as late as Saturday.

The fourth ship was the S.S. American Mail, loaded with four tons of slashed automobile tires last week before the embargo was put into effect. Seattle Customs Collector Howard McGowan ordered the shipment, also bound for Hongkong, unloaded before the ship could sail.

The tires were believed to be destined for trans-shipment to Communist China where the Reds would cut them up and use them for shoes.

U. S. Ship China-Bound With Cotton, Steel, Tin

HONGKONG, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The Isbrandtsen freighter "Flying Clipper" sailed today for the Chinese Communist port of Tsingtao with a cargo of cotton, steel and tin plates.

A spokesman for the American consulate said several crew members protested last Friday over the visit to the Communist port but said they were told before they left New York that the "Clipper" was to call at Tsingtao.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The Swedish Alien Control Commission warned today that Russia's eastern European satellites were planting agents here from ships and that refugees entering the country sometimes were spies. It called on all citizens to report suspicious foreigners.

Chiang Offers Troops Again; Hits 'Munich'

TAIPEI, Formosa, Dec. 5 (AP).—Chiang Kai-shek today promised Nationalist China's full support against appeasement in the Korean crisis and again offered to send troops.

He warned that "war may break out any time" in the event of "another Munich" over Korea.

"If the commander-in-chief of the United Nations forces is given full authority in strategy and this calls for our military support, we shall certainly give it," he told a news conference.

However, the Nationalist leader said he preferred not to discuss the possible use of his troops "before consultation with the United Nations."

"This is the winter season," he said, implying that his soldiers would need winter equipment now. His original offer of 33,000 troops for the Korean campaign was made during the summer.

Chiang declared in a written statement that the U.N. would have to put into effect any major decision of the Truman-Attlee conference, and that any such decision would be an American responsibility.

"The people and Government of the United States," he said, "have never surrendered to brute force or open aggression. Therefore, I think it is inconceivable that there should be another Munich. . . There is no reason whatever to make Korea another Czechoslovakia."

Concessions to the Chinese Communists, his statement said, would lead to the virtual destruction of the United Nations, and "entire mankind would be subjected to the rule of international Communism" if the United States were permitted to collapse.

Volpe Resigns As General Counsel of AEC

Joseph Volpe, jr., general counsel of the Atomic Energy Commission for the last 18 months, yesterday announced his resignation from that post to return to private law practice.

In an exchange of letters, Volpe told AEC Chairman Gordon Dean that he left the organization "with a good deal of reluctance." It was understood that his decision did not reflect any dissatisfaction with current operations of the AEC, but was the result of a long-deferred urge to leave Government employment.

A veteran of atomic work in the Army's Manhattan Engineer District, where he was legal adviser to Gen. Leslie Groves, Volpe has been with the AEC since the fall of 1946. Dean praised Volpe highly in a letter agreeing to accept the resignation, to be effective not later than next January 15.

Truman, Attlee Meet For More Korea Talks

at this time would be a possible attack by Manchuria-based bombers on Allied communications and lines of retreat in Korea. So far this attack has not taken place, and the U.N. air force has therefore kept to the Korean side of the border.

The Chiefs of Staff of the two countries, Field Marshal William Slim and Gen. Omar N. Bradley, have already consulted on what to do in case a large-scale bombing attack should come from the Manchurian side.

In opposing a major "land war" against China, the British do not rule out the possibility of a naval blockade of Chinese ports. But they are unlikely to favor it themselves, if only because their great colonial port of Hongkong depends for its livelihood on coastal trade. And there is no evidence that such a naval blockade could hurt the Chinese Communists seriously, or that the United States would regard it as worth the cost and effort.

British Agreement

British sources indicated yesterday that the Chinese Communist aggression had made the British Government more willing to go along with the United States on two controversial issues:

1. The British not only do not want Communist China seated in the United Nations now, but they would actively oppose such a step until the Chinese withdraw their troops and disavow their aggression in Korea; and

2. The British will not now seek the withdrawal of the American Seventh Fleet from Formosa, or any step that would turn the island over to Communist control.

Also it is taken for granted that the British, with their enormous interest in Malaya, will want the continuance of all possible help in weapons and supplies to the French in Indo-China.

Four-power negotiation with the Russians is another subject on which the Attlee and Truman viewpoints appear to have moved closer together. Before Attlee left London the British and their European neighbors had been in favor of an early meeting of the Big Four Foreign Ministers.

Now the British are considerably less eager for such a meeting in the light of the defeat in Korea. Their attitude is that negotiation can hardly be profitable when one side—namely, the Western powers—has had its weakness made so evident.

The yacht Williamsburg was tied up at the Washington Navy Yard yesterday while the Truman-Attlee meeting took place.

Mr. Truman was the first to reach the dock, arriving at 12:50 p. m. Mr. Attlee arrived 10 minutes later.

Top Republicans Invited

The President invited top Republicans of the Senate and House Foreign Relations Committees to the roast beef luncheon. They were Senator Wiley of Wisconsin, ranking minority member in the absence of Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), and Representative Eaton (R., N. J.).

Other members of Congress who were invited, in addition to Senator Connally, were Speaker Rayburn, Senator George (D., Ga.), and Representative Richards (D., S. C.).

Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, and Secretary of Defense Marshall were on hand, as were General Bradley, W. Averell Harriman, Special Assistant to the President; W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, and Walter S. Gifford, Ambassador-designate to Great Britain.

Prime Minister Attlee was accompanied by Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador; Field Marshal Sir William Slim, and Sir Roger Makins.

The members of Congress left after the luncheon, and other American and British experts went aboard the join in the conference that started at 2:35 p. m. and lasted until 4:45 p. m.

Recessed Until Morning

The Williamsburg conference recessed until this morning without having disposed of Korean and other Far Eastern issues. The "next steps" in the Far East raise so many incalculables that the discussion of each question took a long time.

The big subject of Western rearmament and its economic consequences has not reached the President and Prime Minister, although their subordinates have been busy on it for the past two days.

Attlee hopes to finish the conversations by Thursday evening so that he can leave for Canada Friday on his way home. The Prime Minister will make his first public speech in this country at a National Press Club luncheon today.

West Germans Acknowledge Reich's Debts

BONN, Dec. 5 (AP).—The West German Cabinet decided today to acknowledge responsibility for the prewar debts of Hitler's Reich.

The acknowledgement is one of two assurances required by Western occupation powers in return for the greater political and economic freedoms for the Germans. The other assurance is that German strategic materials will be shared for West European defense.

Parliament has yet to act on the Cabinet's decision. The cabinet action, however, may have cleared the way for the allies to carry out the revision of controls this week or next.

The high commissioners told Chancellor Konrad Adenauer last week they were ready to go ahead with relaxing controls on the basis of a government-backed declaration of responsibility and leave parliamentary ratification until later. Adenauer had expressed doubts that the Western concessions were enough to win German support for rearmament.

A-Bomb Use Defended By Christian Council

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (AP).—The International Council of Christian Churches, defending use of the A-bomb if necessary, today urged President Truman to "stand firm" against "appeasement" of Chinese Communists.

The plea to Mr. Truman was made in a message released by Council President Carl McIntire. The council, representing 15 protestant denominations with a total membership of two million in this country, saw "no moral principles violated in the use of the A-bomb to defend human freedom if necessary. You used it to end World War II. In this you will have the support of God-fearing people."

Controls on Kroner Dropped by Britain

LONDON, Dec. 6 (Wednesday) (U.P.).—Britain dropped currency controls on Danish, Swedish and Norwegian kroner today in the first freeing of a major currency since exchange restrictions were instituted after the war.

British exporters no longer will have to turn over to the Bank of England Kroner that they receive from sale of goods to the Scandinavian countries. They may keep the kroner either in Britain or in the country of origin.

13 Nations Urge Reds to Halt at 38th Parallel

governments and went back into consultation at 6 p. m. The appeal was finally whipped into shape at 8 p. m. and was urgently transmitted to Wu.

Despite the fact that two of the countries did not have instructions, the others decided the situation was so urgent they must make the appeal right away.

Pearson, speaking in a Canadian broadcast shortly after the steering committee sent the Assembly the case of Communist aggression in Korea, said the talks should begin if and when the military situation in Korea is stabilized.

These were the rapid-fire developments in the U. N.:

1. The full Assembly was called into an emergency session for Wednesday to deal with the steering committee recommendation. The Soviet bloc is expected to fight the committee action vigorously.

2. Secretary General Trygve Lie, who has talked twice with Wu Hsiu - chuan, Communist China, said at a dinner in Lie's honor that the nations must seek every honorable means to keep the conflict from spreading, to bring an end to the fighting, and to renew negotiations on the wider issues that divide the world.

3. India and other Asian countries were considering whether to appeal to both sides in Korea for an immediate cease-fire. It was said these countries would not issue an appeal if it were certain to be rejected.

4. Sir Gladwyn Jebb had lunch in his Riverdale (Bronx) home with Ambassador Wu and his advisers. It was a follow-up of a dinner given by Lie last night for Wu and details of the talks were kept secret. Britain has recognized Red China but this is the first direct contact of such high officials of the two governments.

The steering committee disregarded a loud Russian blast against the United States and heeded instead an Australian warning that "there is a state of war going on."

The committee voted 10 to 2 to recommend that the Assembly consider the new business. An all-day—or maybe longer—debate is expected Wednesday, for Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky today indicated he will fight the case at every turn.

Vishinsky and Vladimir Outrata, Czechoslovakia, voted against the majority of 10 on referring the case to the Assembly. India abstained and the president, Nasrollah Entezam, Iran, did not vote.

Vishinsky accused the "ruling circles" of the United States of trying to make the Peiping government a whipping boy to explain away "MacArthur's failures" in Korea. He said the case had been brought in by the servant's door as a counter-charge to Russian allegations of American aggression against China and Korea.

Outrata called the whole affair nefarious.

Warren R. Austin, top United States delegate, who introduced the case before the steering committee, sat grim and silent during Vishinsky's talk.

"The delegations of Cuba, Ecuador, France, Norway, the United Kingdom and the United States have joined together in requesting that the General Assembly consider as an important and urgent question the intervention of the central people's government of the people's republic of China in Korea," Austin said.

"The facts in this matter are well known to all of us and to all the world." He said "the United Nations is under attack."

He related steps in the Security Council that led up to a Russian veto last Thursday of a resolution calling for the Chinese Communists to withdraw. He said the Security Council had been prevented from acting and so the six countries that sponsored the vetoed resolution were calling on the Assembly for action.

Vishinsky retorted that the six countries were trying to brand the Chinese people as the aggressor when everybody knows "the United States is the aggressor."

He said the organizers of this intervention in Korea now find themselves in a "shameful situation" as a result of the setback to "MacArthur's legions" and they have had to produce an answer to their troubles.

Crisis-Besieged U. N. Opens 'Meditation Room'

LAKE SUCCESS, Dec. 5 (AP). The United Nations, besieged by crisis, has opened a "meditation room" here.

Dimly lighted and somberly decorated, it was opened yesterday without announcement as a headquarters haven for delegates, secretariat employes, and public visitors who wish seclusion in which to ruminate on the current perils to peace.

The "meditation room" was set up on orders from Secretary General Trygve Lie at the request of church groups, U. N. officials said.

Arbenz Is President, Election Unit Rules

GUATEMALA, Guatemala, Dec. 5 (AP)—The congressional election committee ruled today that Lieut. Col. Jacobo Arbenz Guzman has won the presidency of Guatemala.

The committee said he received 266,778 out of 416,167 votes, which gives him an absolute majority over the 10 other candidates in the election held November 10-13.

Oust Soviet, Satellites From U. N., Cocke Urges

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (AP).—Expulsion of Soviet Russia and her satellites from the United Nations was demanded today by Erle Cocke, jr., national commander of the American Legion.

Cocke, addressing the Public Relations Society of America, also urged full mobilization in the United States; adoption of universal military training; use of the atomic bomb only for "primary" targets—of which, he said, there was none in Korea or China; revamping of the State Department, and speeding up of civil defense measures.

Bonn Opposes Dutch German Army Plan

LONDON, Dec. 5 (AP).—West Germany reacted strongly today against a Dutch-proposed compromise plan for use of German troops in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) army in Europe.

A West German spokesman in Bonn declared the plan "discriminated against West Germany" and is unacceptable because the Germans would not be regarded as full allies of the 12 member nations.

However, deputies of the pact nations will meet here Wednesday in an effort to reach an agreement on the plan. If France, opposed to the rebirth of a German general staff, agrees, the plan probably will form the broad basis for using German troops in West Europe's defense.

The plan would put into the hands of a civilian high commissioner the recruiting of about 150,000 German troops and their use in brigade combat units of 4000 to 6000 men each with other western forces. The Dutch idea is that the equivalent of 10 divisions could be obtained from West Germany over a three-year period.

The West German spokesman said the Bonn government was irritated at not being consulted, "even unofficially," by any of the nations working on proposals for a German contribution to western defense. The government, headed by Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, has insisted West Germany must be treated as an equal in the line-up against the threat of aggression from the East.

Three high commissioners—British, French and American—still have a hand in German affairs. German diplomatic efforts lately have been concentrated on replacing their rule with a "security treaty" between the occupying powers and Bonn.

French Deputy Herve Alphand went to Paris today to get his government's views on the new plan and will present them at the meeting here tomorrow. French Premier Rene Pleven met with his ministers to clarify the government's policy toward the issue.

War Not Inevitable, Pleven Tells Press Unit

PARIS, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Premier Rene Pleven said today France does not believe war inevitable and that no opportunity to discuss a general peace settlement should be passed up.

But the Western democracies should make it clear they will defend themselves against any aggression, he told a Foreign Press Association luncheon here.

"We must never refuse any opportunity for an understanding," he said, "but we must at the same time not neglect any precaution that would put us in a state of defense and protect us against sudden aggression.

"The French government remains convinced that war is not inevitable.

"Regarding the European question in particular, we believe direct contracts between all interested parties will be useful."

After tonight's Cabinet meeting Foreign Minister Robert Schuman said that the London delegates were "on the right road" toward a compromise on German troops.

Chinese in Korea Shake Pact, Russians Charge

MOSCOW, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The Literary Gazette's political commentator today said the Chinese Communist offensive in Korea has "shaken the foundations of the tottering edifice of the Atlantic Pact."

That, he said, was amply illustrated in British Prime Minister Clement Attlee's rush to Washington to "patch up the cracks."

The Literary Gazette also reported that extraordinary jitters had befallen the United Nations, making American diplomats realize that not one foreign representative at the U. N. stood on America's side.

According to the commentator, the Atlantic Treaty is "splitting at the seams—with Britain, France and the other nations hastening to proclaim their disagreement with President Truman."

New Director Of Board of Trade

LOFTON S. WESLEY, owner of Wesley Hall, will fill the unexpired term of the late Carter T. Barron as a director of the Washington Board of Trade, Board President Thornton W. Owen, announced yesterday. A member of the board since 1938, Wesley is a past president of the Washington Restaurant Association and lives in Spencerville, Md.

House Votes Profit Tax Bill

tween five million and 10 million dollars; 8 percent, between 10 million and 125 million dollars, and 7 percent on capital above $125 million dollars.

A credit of at least $25,000 against excess-profits taxes was written into the bill along with special relief provisions for regulation industries, such as utilities, railroads and airlines.

The House taxmakers claimed the bill will yield $4.6 billion on the basis of next year's expected war-swollen earnings, but Treasury Secretary Snyder failed to go along with that estimate.

He termed it a three-billion-dollar bill and called on the Senate Finance Committee to raise the tax take another billion dollars.

In claiming 500 million dollars more revenue for their "combination tax" substitute on the basis of present earnings, House Republicans said that if corporate profits climb sharply in 1951 so would the yield of their own plan.

The GOP substitute was offered in the form of a motion to recommit the House bill. Instead of strictly limiting the bill to excess profits, the rejected proposal would have:

1. Increase regular corporation income taxes from a top of 45 percent to 50 percent.

2. Allow corporations an average earnings credit of 100 percent on their 1946-49 base before imposing the 75 percent profits tax. The House bill allows only an 85 percent credit.

What form the Senate tax action will take is still a matter of conjecture but Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) last night made it clear he expects the President to get a bill he can sign into law before New Year's.

Some of the Finance committeemen showed interest in the combination tax approach urged by House Republicans. Others indicated that in view of the steep additional taxes that must be levied next session they prefer to confine the present action to a modified version of the Administration's own request. George said only that he expects his committee to make some changes in the House bill.

Business witnesses, almost unanimously opposed to the profits tax method, meanwhile appealed to the Finance Committee to make an across-the-board increase in regular corporate taxes instead.

Beardsley Ruml, representing the Business Committee of Emergency Corporate Taxation before the Senate unit yesterday, put it this way:

"This business committee does not argue with the number of dollars. Whatever amount Congress decides should come from taxes on corporate profits, that amount we do not dispute. Our recommendation here concerns method alone. We are concerned not with how much—but only with how."

Terming the profits tax method "an evil brew of inequity, exception, exemption and privilege," Ruml predicted the Government would collect more from "a sound defense emergency tax on corporate earnings."

Just before final House passage of the profits tax bill, the House adopted "en bloc" a series of committee amendments excluding funds blocked by foreign currency regulations from the tax and providing special treatment for producers of a long list of strategic materials.

Telegraph services were added to the list of telephone, electrical energy, gas and water utilities allowed a 6 percent rate of return before the tax is applied. Such regulated utilities as railroads, arilines and oil and gas piplines would be allowed a 5 percent return before the tax.

Police Seek Thieves Armed to the Teeth

Police last night were hunting store thieves armed to the teeth with a small arsenal stolen from the Lincoln Five and Ten Cent Store, 5121 Grant st. ne.

A store clerk reported that a back window had been broken into last week. Missing articles included:

Four Red Ranger gun and holster sets, five Red Ranger, Jr., cap guns, three Texan guns and holster sets, two Texan, Jr., gun and holster sets, four gold-painted cap guns with red and white handles, four 50-shot "Army .45" style cap guns and three small daggers. Value was estimated at $48.72, police said.

New Trial Ordered For Judith Coplon

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (AP).—A Federal Appeals Court today reversed Judith Coplon's conviction and ordered her retried on a charge of plotting to spy for Russia.

The United States Court of Appeals unanimously ruled that Miss Coplon's arrest by FBI agents without a warrant was illegal. The court's opinion added:

"The conviction must be reversed, but we will not dismiss the indictment, for the guilt is plain . . ."

All three judges agreed in their opinion.

The decision gives the 29-year-old former Government girl a fresh chance at freedom from a 15-year prison sentence imposed on her in New York City last March 9.

But it does not affect a 40-months-to-10-year sentence hanging over her in Washington on a separate count. She was convicted there of stealing Government secrets from her Justice Department office. She is appealing that conviction, too.

The Government now has three choices in the New York case—to appeal today's reversal to the Supreme Court, to retry the case or to drop it. Officials here left the decision to Washington.

Miss Coplon, dark haired, attractive and well educated, was depicted by the Government during her trial here as a furtive agent of the Soviet, a cold war accomplice of the enemies of her native land.

Convicted with he in New York was Valentin A. Gubitchev, 33, a married Soviet engineer and at that time a United Nations employe.

Gubitchev chose to be deported rather than serve a 15-year prison sentence when given a choice by this Government.

The FBI told of tapping her telephone wires, shadowing her to secret night-time rendezvous with Gubitchev and finally running both of them down in a chase through the heart of New York.

Schoolboy, 16, Admits Rape

girl was severely beaten and raped near her home on Sheridan st. nw.

The result of the canvass was that 100 men were questioned. Included was the 16-year-old boy, who, Murray said, was arrested last April on a purse-snatching charge. The boy works part time at a drugstore on upper Georgia ave. nw.

From the description of Monday night's victim, the boy was arrested and questioned. Last night he was booked on charge of rape, assault with intent to commit rape, and robbery.

Major Barrett said the boy left both women "for dead."

At least a dozen extra scout cars were assigned to the area following Monday night's attack, Barrett said.

Parking Approved On Plot Beyond Sidewalk in N.E.

The District Commissioners yesterday approved a change in parking regulations that opened the door to parking on "public parking"—city-owned space between sidewalk and property lines.

Specifically, they approved a request to permit parking of about 300 cars in an industrial area on the north side of New York ave. ne., between Kendall and 16th sts. To do this, however, they had to amend a regulation that prohibits parking in all such areas.

The action does not automatically throw open to parking all such space in the city, Traffic Director George E. Keneipp said. The Commissioners must approve each application individually. The change was in line with a recommendation made by the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board a year ago.

Senate Group Reopens Hearings On Mrs. Rosenberg

By the United Press

The Senate Armed Services Committee voted unanimously yesterday to reopen hearings on Communist front charges against Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, nominated by President Truman to be Assistant Secretary of Defense.

The nomination was approved by the committee last Wednesday and Acting Chairman Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) said it was not recalled. But he announced that a closed-door hearing will be held Thursday to investigate the charges.

Russell said the charges involve an allegation that Mrs. Rosenberg was a member of the now-defunct John Reed clubs, which have been listed by the Justice Department as Communist fronts.

Plea Traced on Window Saves Woman, Children

COVINGTON, Ky., Dec. 5 (AP).—Too weak to call for help, Mrs. Richard Gunn, 27, managed to trace the words "Help me, please" on a window of her apartment here today and she and her two small children were saved from possible death from gas fumes.

Employes of a drilling machine company saw Mrs. Gunn writing on the window and summoned the life-saving squad. The officers found Mrs. Gunn seated at the window, too weak from the effects of the fumes to raise the window or call for help.

Remon Is Confirmed

John A. Remon yesterday was unanimously confirmed by the Senate as a member of the District Redevelopment Land Agency. He was appointed by President Truman for the term ending March 3, 1955.

Mr. Mason's Successor

It is not surprising that several District residents are beginning to enlist support for appointment to the District Board of Commissioners at the expiration of Guy Mason's third term in February. Commissioner Mason has served the District long and faithfully, and, as we have pointed out on several occasions, his stature is above the average of the men who have held this position. We think that the community should continue to take advantage of whatever energies his health may permit him to give to local problems in the future. But, in view of the state of his health, it would be unfair to him and to the District to have him continue to undertake the full-time responsibilities of a Commissioner at a time when civil defense and other emergency problems make the commissionership an exacting full-time job. It should be possible to take advantage of Mr. Mason's experience by giving him a staff position, possibly as special consultant to the Commissioners.

One other reason for selecting a new Commissioner is that support is needed from within the District government for local home rule. President Truman has given strong indorsement to the home-rule movement. But he has not put into office District Commissioners disposed to give detailed thought to modernization of our local government and day-to-day backing of the necessary reforms. Fortunately, there are a number of outstanding citizens identified with the home-rule movement who are either candidates for the commissionership or who could be drafted to accept it. One of the most effective steps the President could take in furtherance of home rule would be the selection of a Commissioner who would give the cause sympathetic leadership within the local government.

U. N. And Korea

For an organization whose existence is at stake, the United Nations is moving at much too leisurely a pace. General MacArthur officially reported that Chinese Communist troops were fighting the U. N. forces in Korea one month ago today. In the last week the Chinese invasion force appears to have been swelled to a million men. Yet, in the face of this open assault against the United Nations itself, no counteraction has been completed at Lake Success.

To be sure, the Security Council was paralyzed by the Russian veto when it attempted last week to pass a resolution calling for withdrawal of the Chinese troops and giving assurance that China's frontier and legitimate Chinese interests in the frontier zone would be respected. But everyone knew in advance that the Russians would employ the veto. It is difficult to see why so much time has been wasted in getting a similar resolution through the General Assembly. While the Steering Committee voted yesterday to place the question of Chinese Communist intervention before the Assembly, the impact of the Assembly's action will be lost amid the news of disaster from the Korean battlefront.

It seems to us, moreover, that other steps are urgently needed. Recently there arrived at Seoul the United Nations Commission for Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea (UNCURK) composed of representatives of seven countries—four of them in Asia. This group has a mandate to bring about the establishment of "a unified, independent and democratic government" in Korea. Considering its broad powers, it could readily serve as a "peace observation commission" especially since the observation unit to be set up under the Acheson plan for strengthening the General Assembly cannot become operative until 1951. Obviously the Assembly is in need of a comprehensive and impartial report on the new situation in Korea as the basis for its future action in dealing with the crisis. It seems to us that it should immediately order such a report from UNCURK.

Further action by the U. N. would naturally be guided by the facts brought to light by UNCURK. Of course, the inquiry should be aimed at determining who is responsible for the new wave of aggressive war loosed upon Korea and the U. N. forces. When such a finding has been made and carefully documented, the U. N. will have no alternative to indicting and condemning those aggressors whether they be in Moscow or Peking or both. Meanwhile, of course, there can be no admission of Communist China into the United Nations. In a civilized society one does not shoot one's way into good company. The first responsibility of the United Nations is to keep its hands clean and its moral position straight. It could doubtless survive a military defeat in a remote corner of the world where employment of its available forces is especially difficult, but it would not likely survive any truckling to naked aggression. The apparent agreement between President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee and other Western statesmen on this point is one of the few encouraging aspects of the present situation.

The first steps, however, are to demand withdrawal of the Chinese Communist invaders and to get UNCURK on the job as a commission of observers. Further delay of these essentials would encourage the aggressors to suppose that the U. N. is relinquishing its moral advantage by default.

Budgetary Gap

In his January, 1950, budget message President Truman estimated Government expenditures for the fiscal year 1951 at 42.4 billion dollars and receipts under then existing tax laws at 37.3 billion. Those estimates were thrown into the discard when Congress appropriated 16.5 billion more for defense than the President had originally requested. Subsequent increases in taxes and increases in receipts brought about by the current business boom have also radically changed the budgetary picture. So far, however, the expanded defense program has had surprisingly little effect on the volume of Government spending. Secretary Snyder, testifying before the Ways and Means Committee on November 15, said that conservative estimates indicated that budget expenditures for this fiscal year would amount to about 45 billion and revenue to 43 billion—a deficit of only two billion dollars. On Monday, testifying before the Senate Finance Committee, he said "In light of the events of the past few days that estimate may prove to be too low."

It is future, not present, spending levels that are the chief cause for concern. The additional sums already appropriated for defense and the 18 billion dollars that the President has just requested (and that Congress will almost certainly grant) will result in a huge expansion of outlays next year. As Secretary Snyder points out, these expenditures for defense will have an inflationary effect in advance of the actual disbursement of funds, since demands for materials, labor, and capital outlays occur as soon as Government contracts are placed. Consequently a tax program designed to curb inflation cannot safely be deferred merely because current expenditures lag behind commitments to spend.

Of course, there is no way of knowing just how large the defense program of the next fiscal year—1951-52—will be, because some of the appropriated funds will be used to finance long-range programs extending over several years. Last September, when he was expecting a successful outcome of the Korean campaign, President Truman said that it would probably be necessary to spend much more than 30 billion for defense in the coming fiscal year. On the basis of such scanty information as is available, it now seems reasonable to assume that defense spending will be running at an annual rate of 40 billion or more in 1951-52, with total budget outlays in the neighborhood of 70 billion, as contrasted with total expenditures of 45 billion for the present fiscal year (Secretary Snyder's estimate).

At this rate of spending the additions to revenue from the new taxes already enacted and the revenue increases from existing taxes resulting from high incomes and increased productivity will obviously fall far short of the amount required to put the country on a pay-as-you-go basis. To bridge the gap between outgo and income, corporation tax increases yielding much more revenue than would be raised by the pending excess profits tax proposal would be needed. Individual income taxes would also have to be increased and stiffer excise levies imposed. Unless all these sources of revenue are tapped, deficit financing on an expansive scale seems inevitable.

We doubt whether the incoming Congress will have the fortitude to increase taxes sufficiently to eliminate future deficits, but we hope that it will at least reduce the need for borrowed funds to a point where they can be obtained mainly from nonbank investors instead of commercial banks. Borrowing from commercial banks is an easy but highly inflationary form of deficit financing that was practiced extensively during World War II. We are suffering today from the effects of that method of financing, which resulted in the creation of billions of dollars of new money in the form of bank deposits. Forewarning of the danger of this practice will not prevent a repetition of the mistakes of the past, however, if deficits are permitted to reach unmanageable proportions because of an inadequate tax program.

Censorship

There is a good deal of point to Lieut. Gen. Sir Horace Robertson's call for some sort of military censorship in Korea at this critical time. "Against an enemy of known limited capacity such as the North Koreans," the British field commander asserts, "it might well be advantageous to relax the accepted standards of security in war to enable the world to be kept fully informed. But now, against a powerful new enemy, making undeclared war on the United Nations and attacking their forces in overwhelming strength, we should no longer broadcast to them over the radio all the latest details of the disposition of our forces and their movements, nor similarly keep them fully informed through the world's press."

Sir Horace's call coincides with a somewhat petulant tendency on the part of some American officials to blame the press and radio for publishing information which allegedly enables the Communists to ascertain the U. N. order of battle. Particularly during a defensive action, it is important not to give away exact troop dispositions and details of losses. But the criticism is directed at the wrong source. For newspapers and radio stations were among the first to call for some sort of guidance to protect them against precisely this sort of attack. As long ago as July 31 this newspaper observed:

> . . . Military authorities on the spot must advise reporters what information can be printed without endangering military security. It is bootless to tell reporters, after a story has been printed, that the news it contained was dangerous and helpful to the enemy . . . The Far East Command, without delay, should set up, down to the lowest feasible level, competent military experts able and ready to advise every correspondent on security problems . . . Unless some kind of order is brought out of the present confusion, the press and the military are going to be subjected to reproach either for disseminating military secrets or for withholding information the people ought to have, or both.

Following this and similar representations, General MacArthur did institute a more comprehensive system of guidance. Before the push northward correspondents were briefed thoroughly on security, and during the recent abortive campaign there was a noticeable tightening of information at the source. This was clearly General MacArthur's prerogative; in time of war a theater commander has full authority to take whatever security precautions he deems necessary.

It may well be that now these precautions are not enough. Newspaper reporters, however conscientious, are not always competent to judge the requirements of security, much less their editors thousands of miles away. But in the absence of official guidance, the berating of the press comes with bad grace. The next move is obviously up to the armed forces themselves. If censorship is dictated by genuine requirements of military security, they will find the press ready and eager to cooperate.

Walker And Almond

One of the anomalies of the Korean war is that there are two separate American commands there with no direct connection between them. Lieut. Gen. Walton Walker's Eighth Army, made up of three corps of U. N. troops, is fighting in the west and central sectors, while Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond's Tenth Corps is committed on the eastern front. The fact that each command is fighting more or less independently and that coordination comes through General MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo has brought criticism that cooperation between the two field commanders is not what it might be.

Specifically the criticism centers on the charge that General Almond, who was MacArthur's chief of staff, has been something of a fair-haired boy. The Army explains, however, that the division of functions was a tactical necessity. The backbone of Korea, a range of rugged mountains, cuts fairly close to the east coast, and the roads across it are poor and few. Hence the Tenth Corps has had to be supplied from Japan instead of Inchon. The alternative to the present situation in which both commanders report to MacArthur would have been some sort of intermediate headquarters to correlate the two. This, however, would not have obviated the supply difficulties.

We suspect that most of the trouble is one of communications. By the same token, if any feeling of favoritism does exist, the seriousness of the situation ought to eliminate it. Little can be accomplished by criticism at this perilous moment, but a later investigation might well seek to determine whether the decision to have two separate commands impeded the military effort.

Statistics In A Knot

Elsewhere on this page this newspaper comments on the call for military censorship in Korea. There is not the slightest relationship between censorship of this sort, dictated by on-the-spot military security, and the absurd construction placed by draft officials on the President's order for surveillance of statistical information. For example, under the Selective Service interpretation of the Bureau of the Budget directive, figures on the ratio of draft rejections to local quotas will no longer be given out. This is an altogether far-fetched reaction to what was an extremely questionable directive in the first place.

When figures on draft quotas are still made public, what is the purpose in suppressing the number of rejections—to kid the Russians into believing that we have a larger Army than we have? And if information about scandalously high rejection rates is bottled up, how will the situation be corrected? When draft officials call for a tougher policy, where will their ammunition be? This is an example of censorship gone mad—the bitter fruit of the obsession that pick-and-choose suppression somehow will hinder the Russians and help us. Surely the rule of common sense must be injected into applications of the President's directive before it blacks out more essential public information and ties the country in knots.

THE COOL MOSS

The quiet lies in the shade's groove—
The shade which pulls its plow across
And up like waves, the small sticks move
To frame the edge of moss.

With our bare feet we touch and press
Its carpet hiding stem and rock
It is the moss's tenderness
The ground is offering where we walk.

God In The U. N.

More than five years ago the United Nations decided that God should not be invoked at its meetings. The chief reason for the rejection of the Creator from the momentous deliberations of this organization was the fear that any mention of the Supreme Being might be offensive to our "good allies," the atheistic representatives of the Soviet government.

Today, as we look back on the most appalling record of futility and confusion ever presented by an assembly of presumably intelligent statesmen, it should be evident that there is a connection between the exclusion of God from the U. N. and the colossal failures that have characterized its efforts. Isn't it possible that if the delegates, from now on, humbly call on God for light and guidance before each session they will be more successful? In these critical days of anxiety and fear it might be well to try this plan.

"Using The Bomb"

Your December 4 editorial on "Using The Bomb" should commend itself to all.

Dr. Gallup thinks a majority in the United States now favors dropping atomic bombs on Chinese cities. Such action against teeming millions of innocent and suffering people would be a monstrous thing. Of course the tactical bombing of concentrations of actively hostile military forces might be a different matter and might well be warranted if military authority should find it to be unavoidable.

But to use the atomic bomb against a mere instrument of aggression, ignoring the real aggressor, would be not only morally wrong but practically unwise and ill-judged. The atomic bomb should be held in reserve for use, if necessary, against the real aggressor. If and when so used it should be dropped on the Kremlin and simultaneously on as many as possible of the most important production centers within Russia. But any threat or warning of the use of the bomb should be given, not in Moscow or in Washington, but in Lake Success.

Z. LEWIS DALBY.
Washington.

The legislative leaders of this country are at this moment making a sorry spectacle of themselves in their hysterical pressure for the use of the atom bomb in the Korean conflict.

The mere possession of such a new and potent weapon of war forces upon this Nation the responsibility of limiting its actual or potential use to those very special instances (if indeed there are any such instances) in which its use would meet the strict and inflexible demands of the moral law. Thus far we have given the world a most unsatisfactory account of our stewardship. Since the close of World War II we have dashed headlong into the fullest possible production of these bombs and have used them as an awful threat to influence or buy the support of the other nations.

It is no wonder that we are viewed with great alarm even by our friends. It is no wonder that the Communists, casting about for some propaganda line that would rank the peoples of the world against us, chose the bomb as the central issue in its hypocritical Stockholm Peace Appeal. We have fed the propaganda mills of Moscow; and we are feeding them today when the men of both houses of Congress call for the use of the bomb as a measure of military expediency.

For once we unleash the bomb we shall have wiped out the prime distinction which separates us from the evil forces we claim to oppose.

Disloyal Thoughts

If Mr. Seth Richardson of the Subversive Activities Control Board made the remarks your issue of December 1 quotes him as having made to the Virginia Student Legal Forum about putting padlocks on the mouths of teachers and scientists, the President should withdraw his appointment. Statements of his kind contribute positively to the social disintegration Russia hopes for in our society.

I do indeed fear that men like Mr. Richardson would like to curb my thinking, and I fear them not because my thoughts are disloyal to my country but because I know that even the freedom to think may be taken away from men, and that the first step in taking that freedom from them is to think as Mr. Richardson does, or as the local news announcer does whom I heard refer to the "bologna of civil rights."

Who are these disloyal teachers, and what are their disloyal ideas? I have taught for 15 years in private and public colleges. I have not yet met a disloyal American among the faculty members I have known.

"Letter To The Chinese"

I cannot resist writing to congratulate you on that most excellent editorial "Letter to the Chinese," reprinted in our Pittsburgh Post-Gazette last week. (Editorial originally published November 24).

This penetrating diagnosis of the history of Sino-Japanese-Russo-American relations in Asia; is a service to our people. It is becoming more and more a well-known and sad commentary on Americans that they do not know history, and that they are therefore in confusion over their wars and diplomatic issues. Our educational system is, of course, at fault, as are our so-called statesmen, who feel that an objective statement of the facts will not be enough to garner the votes.

It is therefore refreshing to see an analysis such as this "Letter to the Chinese," and I believe the writer of it should be, if necessary, encouraged to give us more in the same vein.

"Farouk vs. Frederika"

In regard to your editorial of December 2 concerning an article about Queen Frederika, published in Life magazine November 20, under the title "The Queen Who Made Good," I wish to make a point of the fact that the comment concerning King Farouk of Egypt and attributed to the Queen of Greece has been denied in Athens, as it has been denied by the Greek Ambassador at Cairo.

I would like to mention the declaration of the Assistant Secretary of State of Egypt that from time immemorial there have been ties of close friendship between the people of Egypt and Greece. The Greek press unanimously comments that these words reflect the sentiment of the Greek people toward Egypt.

A Plan For Korea

With humility, yet with the knowledge that what I have advocated in the past concerning Korea might have averted the tragic events now transpiring there, may I at this late hour present a blueprint for the consideration of those endeavoring to reach a solution in Korea?

Actually, what Koreans want is: (1) an end to hostilities; (2) a unified nation; (3) the right to choose their own government; (4) a respect for the sovereign independence and (5) worldwide assistance in the reconstruction of their war-torn country.

How under present conditions is it possible to move from the mental climate of hatred and war into the moderate temperature that would make real these rational objectives? First, we must abandon our present negativism, i.e., the idea it is too late, that nothing can be done with Chinese or Russian Communist leaders, or that morality is all on one side, immorality all on the other.

Considering the above, I suggest the following:

1. An immediate cease-fire, arranged by the United Nations, or responsible noninvolved individuals.

2. Withdrawal of belligerent troops to a demarcation line arranged by the U. N. or responsible noninvolved individuals.

3. Reconstitution of the present U. N. Commission on Korea, acceptable to the U. N., the United States, China and the USSR, to serve as a temporary over-all governing body in Korea. This commission would supervise the withdrawal of all foreign troops, military missions, etc., by a given date.

5. Appointment of a Korean advisory committee, composed of persons of high caliber and integrity who were not and are not connected with either government in Korea, to assist the over-all commission.

6. Organization by the commission of interim local governments in each village, town and city. These local governments would be empowered to exercise administrative and police functions pending a national election.

7. Holding of a free plebiscite without regard to political views or civil status, to choose a form of government for a united Korea. The poll should be held at the earliest moment in a manner fixed by the commission.

8. Upon establishment of a national government through free elections, termination of the authority of the commission and the admission of Korea to the United Nations.

9. Guarantee of the independence and neutrality of a united Korea by the United Nations and by Communist China if it is not a member of the United Nations.

10. A program of reconstruction and rehabilitation of Korea by the United Nations.

The solution I have presented touches the hard core of peace in Asia, namely, the Korean problem. I present it as a Korean, thinking primarily of my country. I am mindful of, though not qualified to offer solutions to, other problems that possibly enter into any agreement concerning Korea, such as the admission of Communist China into the U. N., the position of Nationalist China vis-a-vis the United States and the United Nations, and the fate of Formosa. I can, therefore, only suggest that their solution be considered in the temperate, unemotional climate of reason rather than in one embracing shortsightedness and vindictiveness.

Family Ties And Defense

By Malvina Lindsay

Facing Danger Together

SOME ANXIOUS city persons, visioning future home defense have pictured their children sent far to hinterlands and themselves, weighted with bundles and suitcases, struggling on foot along suburban roads in a mass evacuation. But we are assured nothing so drastic is in store. Families are not to be separated except in extreme peril nor population uprooted. If danger comes, people probably will meet it together—with families, friends, neighbors, work associates.

This should bolster everyone's emotional security, but especially that of children. For, as James J. Wadsworth, acting deputy administrator of civil defense, pointed out recently, Britain's efforts to evacuate children to country areas worked poorly. And it was found during the last war that the emotional wrench of separation on children often had a worse effect than the bombings, also that British children who went through air raids did not suffer emotional injury, provided adults with them remained calm and confident.

Two fears concerning the effect of today's war tensions are being widely discussed. One is that children's personality development will be warped by anxiety. The other is that mental illness, already at a high rate in this country, will materially increase.

Both the White House Conference on Children and Youth, now meeting in Washington, and the Family Service Association of America, which met recently in New York, have gone into these aspects of defense. Both have emphasized the value of stable human relationships as an emotional bulwark in time of tension.

HOWEVER, there is bound to be much family disruption as fathers, sons, brothers, go into service, as mothers go into industry. There are bound to be household moves, economic upsets, sudden changes in living patterns. Hence all the more need for strengthening the intangible ties that hold members of a family together.

Also, say psychologists, group ties, such as those among neighbors, friends, members of organizations, give people more courage and strength to meet danger. For this reason group work of any kind in civil defense is advocated. If this can be carried on in a familiar environment, so much the better, for uprootings of any kind contribute to confusion and anxiety.

Some believe that the middle class family will suffer most from the tensions ahead, because it will find it harder to give up comforts and change habits. Also the children in such families are likely to be over-protected. And we must accept the fact that mental illness of all kinds will likely increase. But we must also recognize that escapsim is not the answer to these problems.

What Mr. Wadsworth deplores as the "take to the hills" mentality has already stirred up much wild imagining, and in time of real danger would no doubt incite panic. But now he states that even in event of an atom bomb attack there will be no evacuation from industrial centers—rather people will be expected to "stand up and fight back." For evacuation proved impractical in the experiences of Britain, Japan and Germany.

AT THE SAME time the individual family shelter is coming more into discussion. Mrs. Ralph S. Healy, volunteer special assistant to the New York State Civil Defense Commission who has just returned from making a study of British home defense, reports that the British are turning from large mass steel and concrete shelters to the small steel quonset hut, half buried in the ground and covered with 3 or 4 feet of earth. If adopted here, this would be the modern successor to the family cave or cellar to which Midwest farm families repaired with lanterns when cyclones threatened.

The greatest help children can be given in defense is to surround them with adults who do not express or reflect anxiety. But many adults will be jittery—and show it. As Miss Charlotte Towle, professor of social service administration at the University of Chicago, told the Family Service Association, "without neuroses all individuals can now realistically fear the future." But she pointed out that social workers should help people channel and sublimate their disturbed feelings. To give them a sense of belonging, through community life, was one of the best ways of doing this.

Churches, schools, community organizations also can do much in this line and should be preparing more actively for this phase of defense. And parents can be conditioning their children for future strain by seeking to give them more of the self assurance that goes with the "healthy personality" the White House conference is emphasizing.

Long Island Blame

On page 5 of your November 25 issue is a story headlined "Engineer's Failure Blamed in Wreck." Immediately under the heading is a photograph of a very troubled-looking man, captioned: "William Murphy was the motorman of the Long Island Railroad train that . . . ."

The news story makes it clear that it is the dead engineer of the rear train who is blamed for the wreck. Later lines under the picture state that Mr. Murphy was driving the forward train which had stalled. The preliminary appearances, at least, are that Mr. Murphy was in no way responsible. To the hurried, scanning reader, however, your layout of the story is almost certain to convey the impression that it is this poor Mr. Murphy who is being blamed for the wreck.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

The Disaster

THE citizens mourned and the city mourned; they had lost the flower of their youth, and there were none to replace them. Whichever way they looked there was trouble; they were overwhelmed by their calamity, and were in fear and consternation unutterable.

This is a fragment from the account of how the people of Athens received the fearful news of the loss of their army at Syracuse, nearly 2500 years ago. History is cruelly repetitious. Thucydides describes with cold precision how incredulity and rage, then sorrow and terror, successively gripped and shook the Athenians. In these days we in America have likewise been gripped and shaken by the same hideous sequence of emotions.

Yet "consternation unutterable" cannot be the final response to disaster of any nation that wishes to survive. It is necessary, therefore, to try to see, first of all, just how the disaster in Korea has affected our situation all over the world. The following is the best summary that can be offered of the grim balance sheet of calamity that the American policy-makers have been busy casting up.

FIRST, the situation in Asia has deteriorated so far that it may well prove impossible to contain the backwash of the Korean defeat. The chances are at least nine to one that their success in Korea will encourage the Chinese to attack again in Indo-China, and perhaps to seize Hongkong. Meanwhile, the Japanese people, encouraged by the spectacle of our misfortune, seeing their country left without a garrison, may well attempt to throw off the yoke of the occupation. Every Asiatic government is already trembling, and the mere loss of Indo-China will alone be enough to cause the eventual loss of all Asia.

To prevent these future horrors, stern action against China is obviously the only recourse. But we have not now the divisions to invade the Chinese mainland. And even when we have rebuilt our Army a full scale ground war with the Chinese will be an unthinkable diversion from the main scene of peril, which is Europe.

Thus blockading the Chinese coast, disrupting the Chinese communications by air attack and encouraging and aiding the anti-Communist forces, including the large band of anti-Communist guerillas in south China, are the only steps open. If this policy is energetically followed, there is a chance—but only a chance—that the Chinese will be kept too busy at home for further adventures abroad, and that the Japanese and other Asiatics will remain quiet. Meanwhile, Korea itself must wait until Western strength has been rebuilt.

SECOND, however, enforcing this policy will be extremely difficult, if only because the main objective of Prime Minister Attlee's current meeting with President Truman is to prevent "entanglement in a Chinese war." Full scale war is what the British fear. The outcome of the Truman-Attlee meeting will show whether they can be persuaded to support more limited measures. Most probably the relief of General of the Army Douglas MacArthur will have to be ordered, if real British and European confidence in our Far Eastern leadership is to be restored.

As though this were not bad enough, the shock of the Korean defeat has obviously tended to paralyze the whole Western alliance. A mood is growing in Britain as well as Europe proper, in which feeble hand-wringing is taken as a substitute for decisive action. The plain truth is that the Western alliance against Soviet aggression is now in deadly peril of falling apart.

THIRD, the revealed discrepancies in Soviet and Western timetables are now downright terrifying. On our side we have torn up the plans to build a Western defense in four years, and the objective now is to do the job in two years. This will place completion of the Western defenses in the winter of 1952-'53 at the earliest. Meanwhile, Soviet war preparation is virtually complete. By the spring of 1952 the Kremlin should dispose of a stock of approximately 60 atomic bombs—enough to paralyze the western Europeans with fear. These facts indicate that the Soviet Union will, in effect, be ready to commit major aggression before we can possibly be ready to repel aggression.

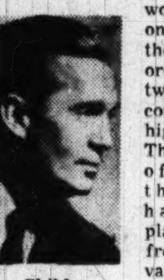
Furthermore, no policy-maker in his senses any longer doubts that overt aggression by the Red army itself is what the future probably holds. Yugoslavia is the greatest European danger spot; Iran in the Middle East is almost as critical, and there are other possibilities. Worse still, no policy-maker in his senses any longer excludes the possibility that this overt full scale action by the Red army, which must lead either to general war or Western surrender, will come next spring, instead of a year later.

Such is the balance sheet, understanding of which is a necessary prelude to action. Its meaning is clear. Only the wisest and most energetic action can now save this Nation and the free world from the fate which at length overtook the Athenians, when the Spartans, another iron military race, triumphed in the Acropolis itself.

Attlee And Truman

By Marquis Childs

The Long-Delayed Meeting



Childs

DECISION of Prime Minister Attlee to fly to Washington in the midst of the developing world crisis is one measure of the lack of coordination between the two countries on the highest level. This is the kind of conference that should have taken place at fairly frequent intervals during the past five years.

It will be the first time that the two men have met since November of 1945. At that time Mr. Attlee came to America to discuss with Mr. Truman the problem of the atomic bomb. Great Britain and Canada had contributed their scientists and their resources toward achieving atomic fission, and the late Mackenzie King of Canada sat down with the President and the Prime Minister.

The conference was intended to settle the peacetime relationships of the three countries on atomic energy and its shared use. Unfortunately, no one had properly briefed either of the two heads of state on the question. Even among their respective staffs there appeared to be little understanding of the whys and wherefores of atomic control at the international level.

Vannevar Bush, the director of the Office of Scientific Research and Development, stepped into the breach. Bush worked all through one night in the White House preparing a draft of a limited agreement on the sharing of atomic information.

This was hasty improvisation, as Bush well knew. There was, however, no other choice since the proper advance steps had not been taken. The Bush draft was, in substance, agreed to.

IT IS indeed a remarkable commentary on the drift of the past five years that this brief and improvised meeting should have been the last time the two men sat down together. Even on the subject covered—atomic energy — the agreement was quickly proved inadequate.

The need for a top-level conference on atomic energy and atomic weapons has long been obvious. The British took with a curious casualness the disclosure that one of the principal British atomic scientists, Klaus Fuchs, had given secret information of the first importance to Russia. This was in contrast to the other extreme of almost hysterical fear that seemed to prevail in America.

A high-level meeting might have provided modification for both extremes. But the truth is that atomic energy is only one of the neglected areas in which in the postwar years there has been a steady drift in opposite directions.

Both Mr. Truman and Mr. Attlee have been too preoccupied with political expediences at home. The Prime Minister has had the problem of holding together his own party. The left wing of the Labor Party has looked with suspicion on America's aims and methods, the latest instance being inspired news stories from London to the effect that the left-wingers resented American pressure for rearmament and wanted equality of partnership in the arms effort. Appearing at a critical moment in the arms negotiation for the Atlantic Pact, these stories caused great embarrassment in London.

MR. TRUMAN has been confronted with critics ranging from the reasonable to the violent who have been either skeptical of building strength in western Europe or downright opposed. Among the critics are those who feel that American force should be concentrated in Asia with all emphasis on military might. The President has from time to time seemed to try to appease these critics.

In both countries there has been a wishful atmosphere that assumed the normality of pre-World War II. This applied not alone to the politicians but to almost everyone. The vast American military machine that existed on V-J Day was dismantled with fantastic destructiveness as the military responded to the almost universal cry of "bring the boys home." In Britain the preoccupation was with the Socialist transformation of society, Conservatives and Laborites fighting with almost equal strength over the nature of the change, if any.

One of the few exceptions was Winston Churchill, the wartime Prime Minister. Repeatedly through the years since '45, Churchill has warned of the danger of allowing the drift to continue without either building the strength of the West or preparing for a realistic approach to the Soviet Union for a settlement of outstanding differences.

The Attlee-Truman meeting can mean a great deal for future cooperation even though it occurs in an atmosphere of hasty improvisation in the midst of a staggering crisis. It should impress upon Americans the urgent need for an understanding with allies, without whom we confront the world alone. For the British it should bring a sharper realization of what must be faced up to at once.

Ross Dies at White House

cause of death was a coronary occlusion. There had been similar but less severe attacks before, the most recent about three months ago.

Mrs. Ross was summoned when her husband collapsed but could not reach the White House until 6:07.

News of what had happened was not made public until 6:30. Eben Ayers, assistant press secretary, walked across the lobby and into the pressroom. His eyes were red and his voice husky.

"This is a tough one," he said. "Charlie died at 5:50 of a coronary occlusion."

It was Gen. Graham who notified President Truman at Blair House that he had lost "Charlie"—tall, stooped, courtly "Charlie" who went to high school with him back in Independence, Mo., and became his White House press secretary and confidant in 1945.

Ross achieved national fame before Mr. Truman did. As a newspaperman, on the staff of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, he won the Pulitzer Prize in 1933 for a story he wrote in 1932 on the depression. He called it "The Country's Plight—What Can Be Done About It."

Ross also was elected president of the Gridiron Club in 1933, later serving as honorary president of Sigma Delta Chi press fraternity and as chairman of the Overseas Writers Club.

Mr. Truman was elected a United States Senator from Missouri in 1934. Ten years later, when he became Vice President, he got a letter from Miss Matilda (Tillie) Brown, who had taught him and Ross at the Independence High School. She wanted to congratulate him.

Mr. Truman showed her letter to Ross, and promised then he would phone her sometime. In 1945, after he had become President and persuaded Ross to join him at the White House, Ross reminded him of his promise to Miss Tillie, their old teacher.

"Why not call her up now and we'll both talk to her?" the President suggested.

Busy In Kitchen

Back in Independence, Miss Tillie, busy in her kitchen, went to answer the phone.

"Miss Tillie, I've just appointed Charlie Ross my personal press secretary," the President told her. "I wanted you to be the first to know about it. We're here together now, talking over old times."

Then Charlie took over the phone.

"Bless your heart!" Miss Tillie cried. "I'm glad you boys are going to work together again. Now you help Harry all you can, Charlie."

Charlie did try to help him, certainly. It might have been that he tried too hard. If the presidency is a killer job, the office of press secretary can be tough at times, too.

Charlie went everywhere with the President—to Potsdam, Mexico City, Ottawa, Rio; on the grueling campaign trips of 1948, and more recently to Wake Island. Some of the time he was suffering cruel pain from arthritis.

A Gentle Man

A lean, gentle man, with features usually associated with the American pioneer, Ross loved the newspaper profession and reminisced about it a lot. He had some scraps with the press-room crowd once he took over a desk at the White House, but this was inevitable. He couldn't tell all, and their job was to try to get all.

The reporters will miss "Charlie."

He was born in Independence, November 19, 1885, son of the town jail-keeper. After he and Harry Truman were graduated from high school in 1901, they didn't see much of each other until their paths crossed many years later in Washington.

Ross entered the University of Missouri and while there worked on the local weekly, the Columbia Herald. After graduation in 1905, he continued to work on the Herald and then switched to the Victor, Colo., Herald, learning the business from the ground up.

Went to St. Louis

From Victor, he went to St. Louis, where he worked for the Post-Dispatch and the old Republican. In 1908, he returned to the University of Missouri as a member of the first faculty of its now famous school of journalism.

In this period, he took a year off and worked for one of Australia's leading dailies, the Melbourne Herald. He returned to the college for a while, then went back to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

He was sent to Washington in 1918 to be in charge of the Post-Dispatch bureau here. He remained until 1934, when he was recalled to the home office to become chief of the editorial page. He came back to Washington in 1939 as a contributing editor and held that job, one of the highest paying posts in the business, until the President drafted him in 1945.

When the announcement was made the "weatherbird" on the front page of the Post-Dispatch reported: "Truman Kidnaped Charlie Ross."

Wife Survives

Ross is survived by his wife, who was Florence Griffin when they were married August 20, 1913; two sons, Dr. John B. Ross of this city and Walter W. Ross of St. Louis; five grandchildren and five sisters.

The sisters are Mrs. Charles H. Weston of Washington, Miss J. B. Ross of Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Miss Helen Ross of Chicago, Miss Ella Ross of Chicago, and Mrs. Fred N. Holmquist of Phoenix, Ariz.

Mrs. Ross said last night at the family home, 117 Kennedy dr., Chevy Chase, Md., that funeral services probably would be here Thursday.

Ross' family asked that friends not send flowers. It was suggested instead that contributions be sent to the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, 535 5th ave., New York. Ross had been painfully afflicted with rheumatism.

Expressions of sorrow over Ross' came from all quarters last night.

British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks, in a statement for himself and Prime Minister Attlee, said:

"The Prime Minister has asked me to say how shocked he is to hear the news of the sudden death of Charlie Ross.

"For myself, the loss of a wise and helpful friend is very sad. His death has thrown a shadow over our immediate deliberations."

Oscar Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, paid tribute to Ross last night at the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth.

"Mr. Ross was one of the great newspapermen of this country. He had honesty and integrity and was honored by members of the press as few persons have been," he said.

Ewing suggested the conference send messages to Mrs. Ross, Miss Helen Ross, the late press secretary's sister and a national committee member of the conference, and to President Truman.

The delegates approved the motion by standing in silence.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson described Ross as a "close personal friend."

"He was one of the warmest and gentlest persons I ever knew," Acheson said. "In his quiet easy way Mr. Ross toiled relentlessly in the interests of the American people. Charley has fought a good fight. He will live on in cherished memory."

Ross a 'Tower of Strength, Truman Says in His Tribute

The White House last night released the following statement from President Truman on the death of his press secretary, Charles G. Ross:

"The friend of my youth, who became a tower of strength when the responsibilities of high office so unexpectedly fell to me, is gone. To collect one's thoughts to pay tribute to Charles Ross in the face of this tragic dispensation is not easy. I knew him as a boy and as a man. In our high school years together he gave promise of the superb intellectual powers which he attained in after life. Teachers and students alike acclaimed him as the best all-around scholar our school had produced.

"His years of preparation were followed by an early maturity of usefulness. In the many roles of life he played his part with exalted honor and an honesty of purpose from which he never deviated. To him as a newspaperman truth was ever mighty as he pursued his work from Washington to the capitals of Europe and to far continents.

"Here at the White House the scope of his influence extended far beyond his varied and complex and always exacting duties as Secretary to the President. He was in charge of press and radio, a field which has steadily broadened in recent years with continuous advance in the technique of communications.

"It was characteristic of Charles Ross that he was holding a press conference when the sudden summons came. We all knew that he was working far beyond his strength. But he would have it so. He fell at his post, a casualty of his fidelity to duty and his determination that our people should know the truth, and all the truth, in these critical times.

His exacting duties did not end with his work as press secretary. More and more, all of us came to depend on the counsel on questions of high public policy which he could give out of the wealth of his learning, his wisdom and his far-flung experience. Patriotism and integrity, honor and honesty, lofty ideals and nobility of intent were his guides, and ordered his life from boyhood onward. He saw life steady and saw it whole. We shall miss him as a public servant, and mourn him as a friend."

Kaiser-Fraezr Given Loan of $25,000,000

By The Associated Press

The Kaiser-Frazer Corp. got another 25 million dollar loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. yesterday to enable it to turn out 600 cars daily and to handle defense contract work.

Henry J. Kaiser promptly announced the auto concern plans to broaden operations by (a) opening a plant in the San Francisco-Oakland area to turn out unspecified military goods and (b) undertaking shipbuilding work.

OF BOOKS AND BRENTANO'S

Have you received your first Christmas card yet? The first one of the year came into the office this morning, from a New York publisher, and sure enough, the caption was "May I be the first to wish you a Merry Christmas . . ." The Christmas Card rush seems to be delayed this year. At least here at Brentano's, everyone seems to be rushing in and ordering in the last two weeks. If you've put it off until now, and are about ready to drop the whole idea because it's so late, by hurrying you may still get your cards into the mail in time . . . Among the nicest inexpensive cards we have had in years are the stained glass window cards you may have seen on the counters of your local Brentano's. The incredible colors (especially the ruby red and deep blue) give them a warm Christmasy look, which after all is the nicest thing a Christmas card can achieve . . . Can it be a fond memory of wartime Washington's Dilbert that makes Robert Osborn's cute cartoon cards among the most popular in Brentano's? . . . During a busy lunch period last week, we were helping out on the floor, at the Christmas card counter, and met a charming elderly lady from Chevy Chase who had what we thought was a lovely idea. She browsed happily for an hour, picking a card here, another there and finally approached us. Turns out she likes to pick different cards for different people, "matching them up," as she said, "with each others personalities." A cartoon of a faun for a favorite niece, a religious motif for a clergyman, a rugged winter scene for an outdoor loving son. It made the sending seem personal and important . . . Ever try catching up on neglected correspondence by using your card for a friendly personal note? It's a pleasant way to bring distant friends up-to-date on another year gone by.

Cop Thrown 85 Feet In Motorcycle Crash

A 24-year-old motorcycle policeman suffered serious injuries last night when he was hurled 85 feet after colliding with a car in his second traffic accident in two months.

Thrift reported he was pacing a car driving south on 6th st. nw. when his motorcycle collided with a northbound automobile starting to turn left into Massachusetts ave. Driver of the turning vehicle was identified as James E. Lewis, 30, a Walter Reed Hospital cook, of 4100 Branch st. ne. He was charged with failing to yield the right of way.

The traffic officer's condition was described last night as fair. He suffered a back injury October 9 in a similar collision at 17th st. and Benning rd. ne.

Earlier in the day Paul Robbin, 51, of 322 Emerson st. nw., was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a possible fractured shoulder. Police said he was struck by an "old automobile" operated by Leroy A. Turpin, 43, of 933 10th st. nw., as he ran across 5th st. nw. above Kansas ave.

Turpin, a plasterer, was booked on charges of driving a car in unsafe mechanical condition, driving with an expired permit and failing to report for inspection of his car. The vehicle was removed to a Police Department inspection station.

A 65-year-old woman who was struck Monday night at Mount Vernon pl. and 9th st. nw. was identified as Mrs. Mattie Baremore, 65, of 1137 12th st. nw. She was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a fractured hip.

Police said she was hit by a car turning from 9th into Mount Vernon pl. and operated by Fred J. O'Conner, 44, of 3101 Douglas st. ne. He was charged with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

Motorist Exonerated In Pedestrian's Death

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated John Johnson, 43, of 437 Q st. nw., in connection with the traffic death of George H. Cornwell, 79, of 1428 A st. se. Mr. Cornwell died Monday in Casualty Hospital of injuries suffered October 24 when he was struck by a car driven by Johnson at E. Capitol st. and Tennessee ave. se.

The jury found that death was accidental after testimony showed the victim was not in the crosswalk at the time, and that he and Johnson did not see each other.

Patterson, who retired last year, had been southeastern region supervisor for the Interstate Commerce Commission

Office Slaying of Food Firm Boss Reenacted in Courtroom

Luther R. Weakley, 49, yesterday re-enacted for a District Court jury the fatal shooting of Thomas G. Carnes, 43, his former employer.

The killing occurred May 20 in the offices of Blue Plate Foods, Inc., 316 F st. ne.

The trial began last week. The case should reach the jury today. Judge Edward M. Curran set final argument for this morning. Weakley is charged with first-degree murder.

Weakley was on the witness stand throughout the day. He maintained he acted in self-defense. He said Carnes threatened to cut his tongue out if he reported shortages in the office to the firm's main office.

In the courtroom demonstration of the killing, Assistant United States Attorney Edward L. Carey represented the slain man.

Weakley said that during the course of the argument, Carnes "went for his pocket, I reached in my left hip pocket, pulled out my gun and shot at his body."

Weakley said that just before the shooting, Carnes "gritted his teeth, his face blowing like a balloon."

When asked whether he had shot once as Carnes sat at his desk, and then three times when Carnes fell to the floor, Weakley replied, "I did not, no, I did not."

Adventists Start Peace Prayer Series

Seventh Day Adventist leaders, at their headquarters in Takoma Park, D. C., yesterday, issued a special call to the denomination's members to pray for Divine intervention in the present international crisis.

Messages were sent by wire and cable to regional and division officials of the church throughout North America and in foreign countries. They asked for prayers "that the winds of strife be held."

First service in the special prayer program was held yesterday morning by 200 members of the General Conference "family"—employes at the SDA headquarters—in the Seminary chapel, Laurel and Eastern aves. nw.

Virginians Protest Dropping Area Telephone Book

Consolidation of suburban telephone subscribers' names in the District directory and elimination of the Northern Virginia phone book were protested as a "nuisance" last night by the Arlington Civic Federation.

Before voting in favor of retaining separate listings, the Federation heard Henry J. Smith, manager of the Arlington office of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia, explain that it is "almost a certainty" that publication of the suburban directory will be suspended, probably in mid-1951.

The Federation also recommended in a resolution to the Arlington County Board that the county plumbing and electrical code be revised to permit homeowners to install equipment with proper permits and inspection directed by the county.

Boy Willing to Meet Santa Claus Halfway

SNYDER, Tex., Dec. 5 (AP).—Jere James, 7, wants a bicycle for Christmas but he's not leaving it entirely up to Santa Claus.

In a letter to Santa Claus, opened by mistake as it passed through the Snyder postoffice en route to the North Pole, Jere explained he has earned some money selling soft drinks — but not enough.

"I'll pay half on a bike," he told Santa, "if you will pay the other half."

F.D.R. to Queen Wilhelmina

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Oct. 17, 1942.

Dear Queen Wilhelmina:

I am very glad that my wife is going to England and I wish much that I could accompany her and have another chance to see you. I am glad, however, to have that delightful photograph of you and to recall our visits to each other last summer.

I had a nice note from Juliana last week and Bernhardt is coming to Washington next week for a few days at the White House.

I am worried again at this moment by the situation in the Southwest Pacific. It is such a terrific distance from our West Coast to the Solomon Islands that the large concentration of Japanese forces may drive us out of Guadalcanal. But even if that happens, a further southward advance by them is by no means certain. We must hope for the best.

I was worried when Marthe came back to the United States a month ago and told me that you had not been well. Do take care of yourself. Remember that all is going to work out well in the end.

With my warm regards,

Very sincerely yours,

The Japanese were trying to dislodge the Marines from Guadalcanal, which had been invaded on August 7th. The situation in the Solomons remained indecisive until the naval battle of Guadalcanal on November 13-15th, in which the Japanese were badly defeated.

F.D.R. to Winston Churchill

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Oct. 19, 1942

Dear Winston:

I confide my Missus to the care of you and Mrs. Churchill. I know our better halves will hit it off beautifully.

All well here, though I am worried about the S. W. Pacific. Every day we are killing a number of Jap ships and planes, but there is no use blinking at the fact that we are greatly outnumbered.

My trip to the West Coast was well worth while and the people are all right—not the newspaper owners. You have that headache, too.

Take care of yourself.

As ever

F.D.R. to Mrs. Roosevelt

BATHURST, GAMBIA
Jan. 13, 1943

Dearest Babs:

Safely across the Atlantic and all goes well except that we had to leave poor Ad. Leahy in Trinidad—for his flu was worse and we did not dare risk pneumonia. We got there Mon. eve. and left yesterday a.m. at 4 a.m.—(I hate flying as the hours of rising are uncivilized) and got to Belem at 3 and had 3 hours ashore with Ad. Ingram and Gen'l Pratt—took on a full load of gas and got under way at 6 and got here at 12 noon (4 p.m. here) after some squalls and headwinds. We found U.S.S. Memphis in the harbor and were soon safely on board. C. R. Smith met us and may take this back. He says Elliott is fine and that I will see him.

We are off at 6 a.m. for that spot you read about so much. It is called "Somewhere in North Africa." Honestly I don't know which one of these we go to.

I'm not crazy about flying, though it does save time if you have very little—rather bumpy both days and once or twice last night.

Good food to eat and my bunk is comfy—and as we haven't been over 10,000 feet I haven't felt the altitude much.

This is a tiny unhealthy spot—but it's a cool day—not over 85 degrees and the nights are cool at this time of year.

Harry & Ross and John are all well. I doubt if I can send a note again. We should get there first!

Ever so much love and don't do too much—and I'll see you soon.

Devotedly,

F.

The President left Washington on January 9th for the Casablanca Conference, and returned on January 31st. He had hoped that Stalin would be able to meet with Churchill and himself, but Stalin begged off because of military responsibilities.

This was the first time that FDR had flown since his flight from Albany to Chicago to accept the nomination in 1932. C. R. Smith, the former head of American Airlines, was now an officer with the Air Transport Command. The cruiser Memphis, on which this letter was written, was anchored at Bathurst and FDR spent the night aboard it. "Harry and Ross and John" at the end of this letter were Hopkins, Dr. McIntire and Naval Aide Captain McCrea, respectively.

F.D.R. to George VI

CASABLANCA,
Jan. 24, 1943

My Dear King George:

I wish much that you could have been with us during the past ten days—a truly mighty meeting in its thoroughness and in the true spirit of comradeship between each officer and his "opposite member."

As for Mr. Churchill and myself, I need not tell you that we make a perfectly matched team in harness and out—and incidentally we had lots of fun together as we always do. Our standards and our unanimous agreements must and will bear fruit.

My wife was thrilled by all that she saw and learned in England, and I am most grateful to you and the Queen for all you did for her.

My warm regards to you both.

Always sincerely yours,

At the Casablanca meetings it was decided that the Sicilian invasion would follow the destruction of Axis forces in North Africa.

F.D.R. to Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House

IN FLIGHT FROM NATAL TO TRINIDAD,
Jan. 29, 1943

Dearest Babs:

What do you know! Back in the U. S. Sat. evening and we should get to Washington by 8 p. m. on Sunday.

All has gone well though I'm a bit tired—too much plane. It affects my head just as ocean cruising affects yours!

This p. m. I am to inspect our troops at Trinidad—be called on by the Gov., spend night at the Navy Hotel and leave Sat. 6 a. m.

I do hope all goes well.

Devotedly,

F.D.R.

F.D.R. to John A. Roosevelt in Oakland, Calif.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Feb. 13, 1943

Dear Johnny:

I am delighted to have your letter and to know that you are off for Oakland. I hope they won't keep you there very long for I know of your real desire to go to sea.

The Casablanca trip was grand but I want you to tell Anne that I dislike flying the more I do of it! She is dead right in her dislike of it!

I will add a bond every three months for the baby out of your allowance if that is all right with you and Anne.

I do wish I could see you to tell you all about the trip. It was really a great success and only General de Gaulle was a thoroughly bad boy. The day he arrived, he thought he was Joan of Arc and the following day he insisted he was Georges Clemenceau. Winston and I decided to get him and Giraud to come to Casablanca and to hold a shotgun wedding. I produced the bridegroom from Algiers but Winston had to make three trys before he could get the bride.

Ever so much love to all four of you.

Affectionately,

"Anne" was John Roosevelt's wife, the former Anne Clark. Johnny's desire to go to sea was not satisfied until 1944, when he was assigned to an aircraft carrier.

The "shotgun wedding" between de Gaulle and Giraud was never consummated, except for purposes of photography. Neither de Gaulle nor Giraud would consent to any arrangement for uniting the anti-Axis French groups, unless each one could have the leadership for himself. From this point on F. D. R. was as vigorously anti-de Gaulle as Secretary Hull.

F.D.R. to Wendell Willkie

THE WHITE HOUSE
March 6, 1943

Dear Wendell:

Somebody called my attention to an article about you by an old friend of mine in the Saturday Evening Post.

In view of certain allegations made by Brother Childs, I want to tell you one or two things with the utmost simplicity.

First, I certainly did not give you any hint of the North African invasion plans. Nor, did I to anyone else except the top Army and Navy people who knew them anyway. Even the Vice President and the Cabinet were given no hint.

Secondly, the records will show that I did not say I was too busy to read what you had had to say. What I did say was that I had been too busy to read the papers that morning and therefore did not know what you had said.

Third, I have in no way "seemed determined to belittle Willkie." The contrary is true. I have on many occasions done just the opposite.

Childs' article is a bit puerile. In regard to the press conference, I did not make a crack at your pronunciation of "reservahr." I used the word in my own way, which happens to be very close to your own way. But it was the press and not me who treated the whole thing as a grand joke and made an episode out of nothing.

It is true, of course, that Stimson called you up about what you were going to say in the Darlan matter. That, however, is water over the dam and things in North Africa seem to be fairly quiet for the American Army forces behind the line.

I guess Childs was trying to make trouble between us because I honestly think you are doing your best to help all of us, from top to bottom, win the war.

Always sincerely,

An article, "Willkie, Crusader For Peace," by the liberal columnist Marquis W. Childs (which appeared in Look and not the Saturday Evening Post), reported Willkie's belief that Washington was trying to shut him up or belittle him.

The "reservahr" reference stemmed from Willkie's frequent statement that our policies were exhausting the reservoir of good will toward us among the semi-colonial peoples. The "Darlan matter" related to Stimson's telephone call to Willkie requesting him not to deliver a scheduled attack on the Darlan deal in North Africa. What had particularly infuriated Willkie was that shortly afterward F. D. R. himself assured the country that we were only making temporary use of the Vichyites for military purposes.

The Gallup Poll

55% Believe U. S. Already in World War III

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 5.—Debate over whether the Korean fighting will lead to a third world war is largely academic, in the view of a majority of Americans. They believe we are already in World War III.

This is shown in a public opinion survey across the Nation in which a representative sample in all walks of life was asked:

"Do you think the United States is now actually in World War III—or do you think the present fighting in Korea will stop short of another world war?"

The interviewing took place in mid-November before the Red Chinese offensive provoked what Gen. Douglas MacArthur has called "an entirely new war."

Even before these developments 55 percent said they felt we were already in World War III, and in view of events during the past few days the proportion now would undoubtedly be even larger.

In World War III	55%
Stop short of war	31
No opinion	14

The vote in the present survey represents a substantial change in attitude since the early days of the Korean war last June.

In a survey conducted by telegraph a few days after President Truman's original decision to back up the United Nations with arms in Korea, the majority of persons questioned said they believed the United Nations action in Korea would be more likely to stave off another world war than lead to one.

Events soon altered this attitude and by August only three persons in every 10 (28 percent) definitely felt that the fighting would stop short of another world war.

Without Painful Backache

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Montgomery Council Asks School Funds

The Montgomery County Council yesterday voted to ask for $3,852,400 in State funds for the county school building program.

The money would be in addition to the $3,692,500 previously granted by the State under the 50-million-dollar school construction assistance program.

Actually, $18,000 of the new request would be a grant from the State and the remaining $3,834,391 would be borrowed.

In another action, the council authorized the county manager to give final notice to some 25 tenants in three county veterans housing projects that they must get up to date in their rent or legal action will be taken. About $7000 in rent is owed, the council reported.

Also at the meeting, Clarence C. Keiser, Bethesda attorney and real estate man, was employed for one year at a salary of $3600 to purchase lots for off-street parking in the Bethesda area.

A request for a new hearing on the proposed animal shelter in Kensington was denied. County Manager Irving G. McNayr said soundproofing will be provided in the animal shelter.

Citizens Ask Building Ban Be Amended

The Metropolis View Citizens Association last night asked the National Production Authority to amend its ban on construction of amusement and entertainment facilities to permit limited construction of recreation facilities by non-profit volunteers or public service organizations.

The resolution was adopted at the group's meeting at the Noyes School. In other business, the association made plans to hold a community Christmas Party in co-operation with the District Recreation Department at 3 p. m., December 24, at Edgewood Playground, Third and Evarts sts. ne.

Palisades Citizens

The Palisades Citizens Association last night completed plans for its community Christmas tree at MacArthur blvd. and Reservoir rd. nw.

Tree-lighting ceremonies will be held at 6 p. m. Sunday, December 17. The tree is being sponsored by the association and the Palisades Community Recreation Council.

In other action at the meeting in Palisades Fieldhouse, members discussed the National Capital Park and Planning Commission's 30-year development plan as it relates to the community.

Wisconsin Central Delay Is Laid to Greed of 2 Rails

By The Associated Press

The Canadian Pacific and Soo Line railroads were accused yesterday of retarding reorganization of the Wisconsin Central Railroad for the purpose of buying it at a low price.

Canadian Pacific controls the Soo Line. The later has been operating Wisconsin Central, which went into receivership in 1932, for the trustee.

A. K. Weber of New York, counsel for a Wisconsin Central preferred stockholders committee, told a Senate commerce subcommittee Canadian Pacific and the Soo Line "could pull this case out of reorganization quickly if they wanted to."

"But," he shouted, "they want to buy this road (Wisconsin Central) cheap and they want to freeze out a lot of people. They will control this railroad in any case."

Johnson Gets Extension

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The directors of the Motion Picture Association of America today extended Eric Johnston's contract as president until 1958. Johnston was named to the post in 1945 and his original five-year contract was extended in 1946 to 1953.

CTC Opposes Fare Increase Asked by 2 Virginia Bus Lines

Capital Transit Co. yesterday opposed a request by two Virginia bus lines for increases in fares between the District and Government installations such as the Pentagon in Virginia.

In a petition filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, the CTC declared any increase in fares by the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. or the Washington, Virginia and Maryland (Arnold) Bus Line would encourage more passengers to shift to the joint fare.

The two Virginia firms have asked ICC for a 15-cent cash fare, or three tokens for 40 cents, while the joint fare, which permits travel on the CTC system in the District, is 16 cents. The D. C. firm contended yesterday that the Virginia firms have failed to show "any need for additional revenue" from the interstate runs.

Since "the revenue received by Capital Transit under the existing joint fare is insufficient to cover its costs, any such additional joint-fare passengers caused by the Virginia companies' fare increases will cause Capital Transit to suffer additional losses," the firm said in its petition.

The petition also slapped at the Defense Department's "apparent apathy" in "failing to except to increases in the Virginia companies' local fares."

"Why should the Department of Defense be concerned over an increase in the Virginia companies' local fares when the passengers need only use the lower joint fare applicable to the same transportation and thus avoid the need for paying the higher fare?" it noted.

Safeway Awarded $267,779 in Meat Suit Against U. S.

Safeway Stores, Inc., yesterday was awarded a judgment for $267,779 against the Federal Government for meat requisitioned during World War II.

The United States Court of Claims made the award after hearing a suit in which the firm asked $1,032,000 above the amount paid by the Government for 23 million pounds of carcass beef.

Safeway said it was entitled to the price at which it could have sold the meat at retail, but the court, in an opinion by Judge Samuel E. Whitaker, decided it could collect only the wholesale price plus a Government subsidy.

The firm had received the wholesale ceiling price and the judgment gave it the "amount of subsidy all other non-processing packers were paid." The subsidy was paid to packers because they had "to buy live cattle on a market in which the defendant (the Government) had found it impractical to fix controls and had to sell the products therefrom in a controlled market." Safeway had been denied this subsidy.

Arthur B. Hanson of Hanson, Lovett and Dale, Safeway attorneys, said four other suits have been filed against the Government on similar complaints and others may be submitted later.

Toll of Tuberculosis Drops to All-Time Low

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The tuberculosis death toll declined 12 percent this year to an all-time low, statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., reported today.

The statisticians said that fewer than 30 of each 100,000 American deaths now result from the disease and predicted that the rate would drop to less than 20 per 100,000 in the next 10 years.

Charles Knocks Out Nick Barone in 11th Round

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

WALLY BUTTS, the Georgia coach, all 200 pounds of him, neatly side-stepped the direct question. They asked Butts if he put in with Earl Blaik, the Army coach, in Blaik's contention that the college boys play harder football than the pros.

"Excuse me, I don't want to get into that," said Butts warily. "That's Blaik's baby, and I am in no position to get critical after what happened to us last weekend . . . and come to think of it, neither is Blaik."

POVICH

The team that Butts is bringing from Georgia to contest with Texas A. and M. in the President's Cup game on Saturday is not one of his best Georgia teams. "But defensively it is my best," he was saying. "Good defensive football may not be exciting to the fans but it can be pretty thrilling to a coach who'd like to save his job."

Georgia has allowed less than one touchdown per game this season, and the Bulldogs' tackling has paid off handsomely in another direction. For what it is worth to Texas A. and M. scouts, half of the Bulldogs' touchdowns this year have stemmed from tackles that have created enemy fumbles.

THERE WAS a reminder of the kind of tackling that Butts teaches only last weekend in Pittsburgh when the Redskins were playing the Steelers. Redskin End Joe Terreshinski, the old Georgia boy, met up with Joe Geri of the Steelers so forcibly that Geri was numbed. Before Terreshinski could disengage himself, he heard Geri saying:

"Say, Joe, you're the same dirty you-know-what as when we were in school together."

His Georgia players have rebelled on occasion at the driving tactics of Butts, a baby-faced cherub who can be a Legree on the practice field. A couple of years back, Tommy Greene, a 200-pound tackle, tired of the slave-driving and took a punch at Butts. When Wally picked himself up off the ground, he ordered Greene out of uniform and off the squad.

A bit later, Butts realized he had fired the best tackle in the Southeast Conference. He was inconsolable, yet knowing he couldn't temporize with insubordination. A great tactician, he solved the dilemma nicely by telling his players they could vote on whether Greene should be invited back on the team or excluded. And as a precaution, Butts suggested they vote him back.

Mostly, though, Butts' players get a satisfaction out of being known as rack-'em-up guys and willingly abide the drudgery of the rugged workouts. Georgia is the only college team that doesn't have Sundays off. Butts has 'em out there working out the kinks from Saturday's games, but relents on Mondays.

In the Southeastern Conference, it is a habit now of teams playing the Bulldogs to schedule an open date for the following week, or at least a breather opponent. "It takes us too long to recover from a Georgia game," is the complaint.

There are no fewer than 14 boys from the mining country of Pennsylvania and Ohio who are now on Butts' squad after having been convinced of the finer academic and cultural advantages available at Athens, Ga. One of these is one Zippy Morocco, left halfback, whose dormitory bedroom is adorned by a pair of blackened miners' gloves hanging from the wall.

"Every time I think we are getting a rough time from Coach Butts," he says, "I look at those gloves of mine and remember that it was even tougher working in those coal mines."

ONE OF THE PRETTIER stories of this year's Georgia team is that of Mike Merola, the team captain, who was unknown as a football prospect when he registered three years ago. The school was so filled with vets on G. I. scholarships, Marola was shunted off the campus to the branch college at Savannah. Georgia coaches found him down there playing touch football and invited him to join Butts' happy throng. He's the regular right end.

The regular end on the other end of the line is very apt to be John Carson, the sophomore from Atlanta, who has a distinction of his own. He's the grandson of "Fiddlin' John" Carson, who campaigned with the late Gene Talmadge, Georgia's Governor, catching the conscience of the wool hats with his twanging on a genuine Stradivarius. Young Carson now owns the Strad and plays a mean fiddle himself.

You'll see the Georgia boys calling no time-outs on Saturday against Texas A. and M. unless somebody is hurt. Butts is against those two-minute rest periods. And when the opposition calls a time-out, Georgia's boys never flop on the ground. They always stand. That way, Butts says, he can always tell which are in shape. And no drinking water during time-outs either. The best Butts will give them is a wet towel to suck on. He insists they be real tough.

Comedown From 43,000

Legion Bowl Game Officials Now Expect Crowd of 20,000

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

American Legion sponsors of the Georgia-Texas A. & M. Presidential Cup game yesterday revised their estimate of how many people will attend Saturday's Byrd Stadium contest.

They are expecting 20,000 fans out for the game. At one time they hoped it would draw a capacity crowd of 43,000.

"Georgia's upset by Georgia Tech, Texas' 17-0 victory over the Aggies, the recent bad weather and war hysteria" were cited by a Legion spokesman as the causes for the reduced crowd estimate.

"If Georgia had beaten Georgia Tech last Saturday, business would have boomed Monday," the Legion official said. "But that was one of the gambles we took when we matched teams before their season was over.

None of the sponsors would venture an opinion as to how many of the $6.60 and $4.80 tickets have been sold already but the best guess is that about 5000 have been disposed of.

"Our advance is not as good as we had anticipated, but there's still plenty of time left," one Legionnaire said.

Among the unreported ticket agencies are those at Athens, Ga., home of the Bulldogs, and College Station, Tex., home of the Aggies. About 1500 tickets were sent to Texas and 2500 to Georgia.

The Legion announced that 10,000 unreserved seats—end zone seats—selling for $2.40 would be placed on sale at Byrd Stadium at 9 a. m. Saturday.

Yesterday, the Legion earned $15,000 from television, radio and the game program figure to put the sponsors over the financial hump. A 41-station video hookup, in which Washington and Baltimore are not included, will telecast the game.

IN SHORT—The airline flying the Aggies to Washington for the game apparently doesn't know whom the Texans are playing. A release from Braniff Airways yesterday said they were bringing the Aggies here to play "Maryland in the Presidential Cup game" . . . Maryland University students have been offered a special rate of $3.00 for the game, 60 cents more than the general admission price . . . "Our advance is . . ." 2000 Air Force,

Janowicz Wins Heisman Cup

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (AP).—Vic Janowicz, a standout on offense and defense for Ohio State, has been chosen as the 1950 winner of the Heisman Memorial Trophy, awarded annually to the "outstanding college football player in the United States."

The announcement was made today by the trophy committee which polled sports writers and sportscaster from coast to coast.

Sophs Are Good, Hoyas Win, 92-61, Over Geneva

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown's tall — and, at times, terrific—sophomores opened the Hoyas season last night at Uline Arena with an impressive 92-61 victory over Geneva College.

A crowd of 765 saw lanky Barry Sullivan get them off well with a barrage of 12 points in the first 10 minutes and wind up high scorer for the Hoyas with 22 points.

Sullivan, ace of the frosh last year until he broke his wrist, quickly showed that he has regained his scoring touch. Trailing him in the point department were Bill Bolger with 15, and John Hekker with 13.

Al Vlasic, a visiting Pennsylvanian, shaded Sullivan for the night with seven field goals and 10 foul goals for 24 points. Lloyd Cable with 17 and Sarge Alberts with 11 did most of the rest of the scoring for Geneva.

If the five starting Hoya sophs were nervous, they concealed it by loping to an 18-3 lead in the first six minutes. As well as scoring rapidly, they played excellent defensive ball and it took Geneva eight minutes and 40 seconds to register its first field goal.

After intermission, Geneva cut Georgetown's lead to 53-43 but Sullivan, passing as well as shooting nicely, and Bolger led a drive that increased it to 20 points.

When Georgetown's lead became 79-54 in the last five minutes, Coach Buddy O'Grady cleared his bench but the score still mounted.

In the preliminary, the Hoya frosh romped over the Alumni, 62-40. Lou Giganti led the yearlings with 14 points, while Miggs Reilly and Steve Rogers topped the grads, each tallying three baskets.

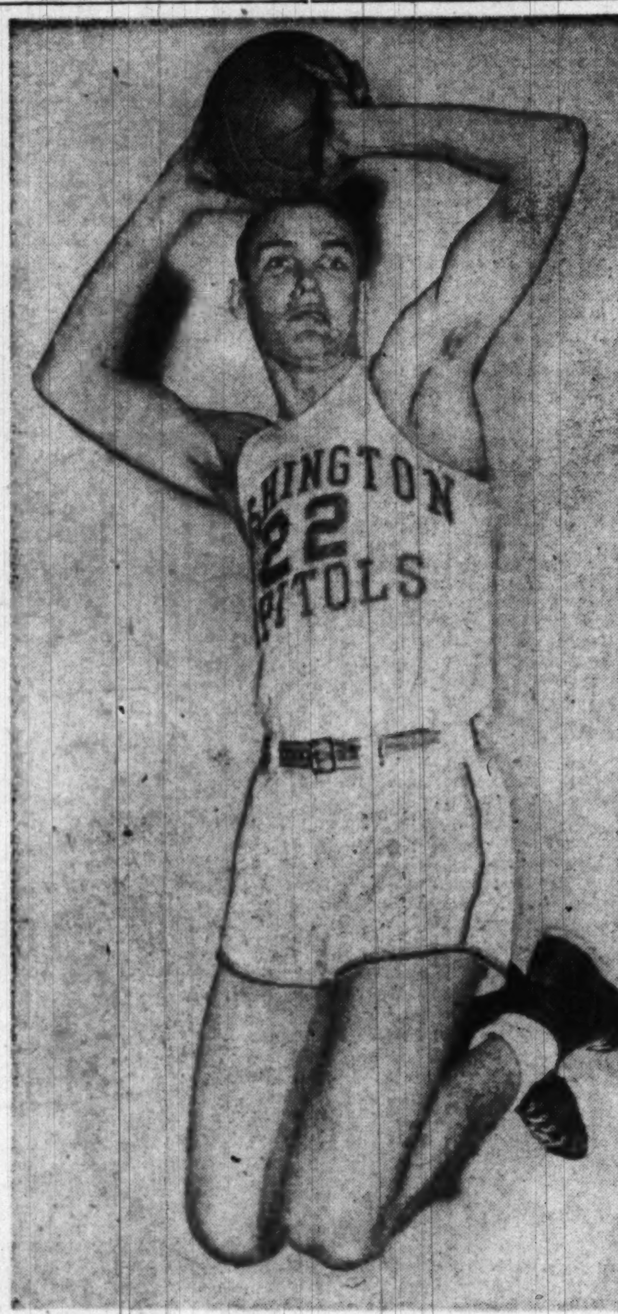
Boxer Samuel Brown Killed in Auto Crash

MULTON, Mo., Dec. 5 (AP)—Samuel Brown, Negro boxer from Charleston, Ind., was killed and five other boxers were injured in an automobile collision early today. Officers said it had been snowing for half an hour at the scene of the collision and the highway was slushy. Among those injured in the collision was Thomas Leeper, Indianapolis fight manager.



BACK WITH CAPS—Dick Schnittker, All-American from Ohio State, will be back in the Caps lineup tonight against Indianapolis at Uline Arena after a layoff of two weeks due to a fractured cheek. Schnittker is 6 feet 5 inches, 206 pounds, one of the Caps' top scorers

Caps Face Olympians Here Tonight

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Healed and fit for the first time in two weeks, the Washington Caps meet the Indianapolis Olympians tonight at 8 o'clock at Uline Arena.

For the first time since November 22, the Caps will have the services of both of their 1949 Collier's All-Americans, Dick Schnittker of Ohio State and Bill Sharman of Southern California.

Schnittker fractured his right cheekbone against New York, and Sharman sprained his ankle against Tri-Cities. Of the seven games missed by Schnittker, the Caps have lost six. Sharman returned three games ago and scored 51 points since then.

Schnittker will be wearing a special leather and metal mask to protect his cheekbone. The contraption was put together by Trainer George Lentz, who invented, among other things, the special elevator shoe which helped the Nats' Sam Mele forget a bad heel and a hitting slump last summer.

With the two of them back together, Coach Bones McKinney figures to have the Caps at full strength against the Olympians, composed mainly of the University of Kentucky aces who represented the United States in the 948 Olympics.

A month ago, the Caps, with Sharman and Schnittker in action, outran and outshot the Olympians here, 100-84. At that time, the Olympians were leading the National Basketball Association's Western Division. Since then, they've dropped into third place, 1½ games behind Fort Wayne. The Caps are fifth in the six-team Eastern Division.

Indianapolis' team is built around five former Kentucky greats, Player-Coach Cliff Barker, Joe Holland, Alex Groza, Ralph Beard and Wallace (Wah Wah) Jones.

Firemen Win Fourth In Row in "Y" League

The District Fire Department basketball team took undisputed possession of first place in the YMCA league last night by defeating Patent Office, 59-35. Buddy Wickers and Francis Mayhew scored 20 points each for the Firemen, who have won four games without a loss.

Bethesda, Gonzaga, St. John's Take Part In Clinic Saturday

St. John's, Bethesda Chevy-Chase and Gonzaga yesterday rounded out six schoolboy teams that will engage in scrimmages at the Washington Caps clinic at Uline Arena Saturday.

The other three teams that will take part in the scrimmages are McKinley, Eastern and St. Alban's.

The six teams will pair off in three 10-minute scrimmages. Members of the Caps will point out to the players how they might improve their play.

All of the boys and girls in town are invited to attend the Caps clinic, beginning at 1 p. m. Each youngster will receive an illustrated book on "How to Play Basketball," a Junior Caps button, which will entitle him to attend the Caps' "big league" games for 25 cents, and autographed pictures of the Caps.

Tom Hardiman Awarded Blozis Trophy at Dinner

Quarterback Tom Hardiman last night was awarded the Al Blozis Trophy as Georgetown's outstanding football player of the year at a banquet in Ryan Dining Hall on the Georgetown campus.

Bob Margarita, head football coach, made the presentation. Among those who spoke was Joe McFadden, who quarterbacked the 1940 Hoya team on which Blozis was the star tackle. Blozis Jack Kivus, who won the Blozis Trophy last year, is studying for the priesthood in Minnesota. World War II.

Margarita also read a telegram of congratulations from Jack Kivus, who won the Blozis Trophy last year. Kivus is studying for the priesthood in Minnesota.

Irish, Southern Cal Play in 1952

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5 (AP).—Notre Dame and the University of Southern California today extended their long intersectional football series for an extra year.

Setting at rest recent rumors that the long series would be discontinued, Athletic Director Willis O. Hunter of USC said the teams will play again in 1952.

Even If Everyone Does Laugh . .

Coach Bud Wilkinson Just 'Doesn't Believe' His Oklahoma Team Can Beat Kentucky

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 5 (AP).—"Everybody laughs when I say it, but I honestly don't believe we can beat Kentucky,—so said Oklahoma Coach Bud Wilkinson today, less than four week before Kentucky's Sugar Bowl.

"It's all a matter of defense and depth.

"Our defense was fine until the last three games, but in the last three games it has gone to pot some," he wailed. (Note he only said 'some,' and not to Oklahoma came from behind to win five of their games.)

Particularly, though, is this true, he moaned, of defense against passes such as Kentucky's Vito (Babe) Parilli likes to toss.

Wilkinson, who hasn't seen Kentucky play this season, "not even in newsreels or in film," said he and Kentucky Coach "Bear" Bryant have agreed to trade four films of their teams so they may know what to expect New Year's Day.

Wilkinson's groaning wasn't based on any idea that his team isn't a good one. He thinks it's a great aggregation. He expects it to be. But there's that matter of depth.

"We can field one pretty darned good team," he said. "If I use it on offense, it will look great. But I can't use them for the full 60 minutes. The boys just run out of gas. And when I spell them, we get hurt.

"Kentucky, over-all, has a wonderful record. But their defensive record is so far superior to ours that we aren't even close. Offensively we can come much closer."

Before flying back to Norman, Okla., Wilkinson said the Sooners will resume practice next week.

He said the 44-man squad will fly to Biloxi, Miss., December 26.

Right Cross To Chin Ends Unexciting Title Fight

By Fritz Howell

CINCINNATI, Dec. 5 (AP).—Ezzard Charles successfully defended his heavyweight championship for the fifth time tonight, knocking out Nick Barone of Syracuse, N. Y., in 2:06 of the eleventh round in a bout which lacked luster up to the payoff punch.

A crowd of about 10,085 home town fans, who paid $53,334.50, cheered the Cincinnati Negro's conquest of the 24-year-old former Marine. It was Barone's first knockdown and knockout of his 53-scrap career.

Ez in Command

Charles had command practically all the way, even beating Barone at his own game of infighting—the one angle on which the New Yorker was expected to excel.

The finish came with startling suddenness after 10 rounds of more or less drab infighting punctuated by some long-distance punching by the champion.

Barone, slowed down from Charles' terrific punches in the eighth, ninth and tenth, was almost mumbled by a solid right to the jaw early in the eleventh. A wobbly Barone came back from that slugging only to run into a barrage of rights and lefts to the head — climaxed by one winging right to the chin which dropped him into the resin.

The game kid, his eyes glazed, sat up at the count of six but his legs refused to lift him from the middle of the ring and he was counted out by Referee Tony Warndorff.

"It started as a left to the jaw, but wound up right in Nick's middle. The right to the jaw followed. Nick is a good, strong boy, and if he gets to punching sharper he'll be all right."

Frenchman Wins Fight

MONTREAL, Dec. 5 (AP).—Laurent Dauthuille of France, a leading contender for the world middleweight title, scored a unanimous 10-round decision over Otis Graham of Philadelphia in tonight's feature bout at the forum before 6000.

Only knockdown came in the fifth when Dauthuille dropped Graham with a right to the chin. Graham managed to ride out the storm.

Mel Ott Gets Dressen's Job At Oakland

By Jack Hand

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 5 (AP).—Mel Ott, the all-time home run king of the National League, returned to baseball today as manager of the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League.

Clarence (Brick) Laws, Oakland president, signed Ott to a two-year contract at an undisclosed salary. The former New York Giants star outfielder and manager succeeds Chuck Dressen, recently named Brooklyn skipper.

The news about Ott overshadowed other developments at the baseball winter meetings as the minor leagues polished off their draft in two long sessions. Tomorrow morning the minors get down to even more serious business to discuss the bonus rule, high school rule and radio and television.

There wasn't a baseball man in the house who wasn't tickled to see Ott make his connection at Oakland where Dressen and Casey Stengel were so successful. Ott, a soft-spoken southern gentleman, has a host of friends.

With Ott at Oakland, Joe Gordon at Sacramento and Rogers Hornsby at Seattle, Coast League fans will have an all-star delegation of new managers.

Ott, a Giant for 25 years, departed at the end of the 1950 season. Since he reported to John McGraw in 1926, a 16-year-old from Louisiana with a straw suitcase, he had been connected with the New York club as player, manager or scout.

Arlington's Guy Brill Drafted by Waterloo Club

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 5.—Pitcher Guy Brill of Arlington, Va., today was drafted by Waterloo, Iowa, of the Class B Three-Eye League at the minor league baseball meetings. Waterloo is an affiliate of the Chicago White Sox. Last year, Brill pitched for Abbeville, La., of the Class C Evangeline League.

Indianapolis Defeats Knicks

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 5 (AP). The Indianapolis Olympians almost blew a 19-point lead tonight while Center Alex Groza was taking a rest, but revived to defeat the New York Knickerbockers, 95-89.

Indianapolis' big margin at 82-63 was cut to 89-87 by a Knickerbocker rally led by Mickey McGuire and Connie Simmons. Groza came back to hit a couple of free throws and Indianapolis kept on top the rest of the way.

Real Man About It

Clark Griffith Has Hernia Operation; Condition Good

Clark Griffith

"We hope that Mr. Griffith will be able to leave the hospital by the end of the week," Dr. Resta said. "However, with a man of his age, we don't want to rush things."

Dr. Resta said that Griff had been putting off the operation "for some time" but his condition became so painful last week it was decided to operate on him yesterday.

"Mr. Griffith was all man going through the operation," said Dr. Resta. "Perhaps his baseball training helped him, I don't know. But he was all man."

After he has recuperated sufficiently, he and Mrs. Griffith will journey to Orlando, Fla., where the Nats later will set up their spring training camp. Mr. and Mrs. Griffith celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary last Sunday.

Terps' Ward Selected on All-America

Guard Bobby Ward, of Maryland, was selected on the Look Magazine All-America football team yesterday.

The team was picked by Grantland Rice and the Football Writers Association for the magazine. Ward was named to the offensive team.

It was the sixth honor of the past few days for the 23-year-old junior from Elizabeth, N. J. He has been named to Collier's All-South team, the Southern Conference Sports Writers Association team, United Press Second All-America, The Sporting News Second All-America team and the Newspaper Enterprise Association first team.

Ward was presented with a gold football and a Look All-America certificate last night by Shirley Povich, sports columnist of The Washington Post.

Ward will appear on We The People radio and television programs originating in New York Thursday and Friday nights, respectively. Rice will help conduct the television show.

George Turns Inventor

Selkirk Won't Let 'Em Slide—Unless His Harness Is Used

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 5 (AP).—George "Twinkletoes" Selkirk, new manager of the Kansas City Blues of the American Association, is not one to let things slide—not when he can win himself a name as an inventor.

Selkirk, who succeeded to Babe Ruth's job in the New York Yankees' outfield, has patented a harness to save legs and uniforms when baseball players practice sliding. The harness, which fits around the waist and knees, is made of padding, canvas and other hardy materials. The player wears the harness over his regular uniform.

Selkirk says he conceived the idea for his invention in 1946 when Bobby Brown, now a regular infielder with the New York Yankees, was learning the game with the Newark Bears of the International League. Selkirk then was manager of the Bears, and he tired of seeing Bobby sitting on the bench with injuries received in slides.

California Gets Six on Stars

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 5 (AP).—Rose Bowl-bound California topped the Associated Press' 26th annual All Coast football consensus selections, placing three men on the offensive team and three on the defensive unit.

The championship Bears won representation on offense with Bob Karpe, tacke; Hafback Jim Monachina and Fullback John Olszewski.

Second Army Fight Tourney Starts Tonight

FORT MEADE, Md., Dec. 5.—Fort Meade defends its championship in the Second Army area boxing tournament which opens at the field house here tomorrow night and continues through Saturday.

Meade has entered four defending champions. A fifth titleholder who will see action is Lightheavyweight Curtis Lowe of Fort Lee.

Champions representing Meade will be John Hawthorne, middleweight, George Davis, flyweight, Pete Garabito, bantamweight, and Bob Whares, heavyweight.

Garabito also holds the 1950 All-Army bantam title and was named the outstanding fighter in the event held at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Winners in the Second Army tourney will qualify for the 1951 All-Army tourney, which, in turn, is a trial for the National A. A. U. tournament at Kansas City late next month.

Tonight's pairings:
Featherweight—Luiz Soares, Fort Lee, vs. Wayne Bair, Fort Knox.
Welterweight — Vernall Turner, Fort Knox, vs. Gilbert Romo, Army Chemical Center; Ronnie Walker, Fort Campbell, vs. Patrick Best, Fort Lee; Art Brown, Fort Eustis, vs. Fleming Butler, Fort Meade.
Light heavyweight—Roy Ramsey, Fort Meade, vs. Charles Smith, Army Chemical Center.
Heavyweight — Robert Phares, Fort Meade, vs. Edward Williams, Fort Eustis.

Maryland Takes Trip, Meets Penn

Navy's somewhat small but experienced basketball team opens its 19-game schedule 4:30 p. m. today in Annapolis against the University of Virginia.

Joe Fatzpatrick, 5-foot-11 forward, captains the Middies and is one of five seniors. Others starting their third seasons include Dave Mullaney, Bill Wilson, Pat Corrigan and Chet McDonough.

Fritz Davis, a junior, is the tallest man on the squad at 6.4. That height is the maximum allowed at the Naval Academy. Pressing that limit are five third classmen (sophs) including Jack Cardwell, Mac Cramer, Bill Frohliger, Don Kniss and Chuck Rutherford.

TODAY'S GAMES
Virginia at Navy
Maryland at Penn.
Geneva at Quantico.

Virginia, in its twenty-first year under popular Gus Tebell, lost its opener to Maryland at College Park last Friday night, 59-57. The Cavaliers have a predominantly sophomore club.

In other games tonight, Maryland plays Penn, perennial Ivy League power, at Philadelphia, and Geneva travels to Quantico.

5 Best Ball 65s at Miami

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 5 (AP).—Five teams deadlocked with best ball scores of seven under par 65 today during the 18-hole qualifying round to pick 16 teams to compete in the $10,000 Miami International Four-Ball Golf Tournament beginning tomorrow.

Sixteen two-man teams made up of the Nation's top professional golfers already had been invited to participate in the grueling five-day tournament.

The five teams who set the qualifying round pace were Willie Klein, Miami Beach and Eldon Briggs, Saginaw, Mich., who carded a best ball of 33, 32—65. Wally Ulrich, Austin, Tex., and Herman Scharlau, Boca Raton, Fla., were out in 34 and back in five-under par 31.

Otey Crisman, Selma, Ala., and Harold Williams, Tuscaloosa, Ala., each carded four birdies to come in with a best ball of 31, 34. Doug Ford, Briarcliff, N. Y., and Julius Boros, Mid Pines, N. C., carded 32, 33 and the team of Dick Newmann and Ted Huge, both of Cleveland, Ohio, fired a best ball of 32, 33.

Anglers Suffer

Bay Reaches Muddy Peak With Storms

By Ralph Murdock

FOR THE FOURTH straight weekend the local anglers took another drubbing — rough weather. Never can we recall seeing the Ole Chesapeake Bay any muddier. We fished with Ray Wilson, Bob Martin and Sergeant Billy Roberts, now stationed at Andrews Field Air Base.

Murdock

The latter, a native of Mississippi, pulled the most timely wise crack on the trip by remarking, "Let's try for the mud-cats. We always have good luck in the Mississippi River right after a good flood. A rockfish wouldn't see our lures if you dragged 'em right past his nose."

The sergeant was right. We were skunked. Not even a catfish. To add insult to injury, Bert Lamb, our skipper hoisted a white flag with an imprinted skunk. ("White stripes and everything—but the odor). Incidentally, the "skunk" flag was donated to Lamb by District Judge Edward Lamm.

CAPTAIN AND MRS. John W. Green of 2000 Fort Davis st. se., have just returned from a three-week trip to Mexico and Guatemala. In Acapulco, Captain Green latched on to a record sailfish of 86 pounds which measured 9 feet 5 inches in length. The captain is with the Baltimore Steam Packet Co. and Mrs. Green is manager of the Ask Mr. Foster Travel Service locally.

Oxford Wins Rugby

LONDON, Dec. 5 (AP).—Oxford defeated Cambridge 8-to-0, before 53,000 fans today in the annual varsity rugby match at Twickenham.

Camera Has Busy Day at Charles Town

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 5.—On a program marked by some of the tightest finishes in the history of this track, it was only fitting that a photo should be necessary to determine the winner of the Harpers Ferry Purse, featuring the Tuesday card.

Jim Arthur's Tampero, backed into odds-on favoritism, had to go all out to win by a scant head from E. L. Rankin's Curiosity. Third in the field of nine was Joe Valia's Tick Out.

With young Dick Lawless in the saddle, Tampero paid $3.80 to win. The son of Whirlaway was clocked in 1:29 1/5 for the about 7 furlongs over a slow track.

In addition to a variety of prices and finishes the day also brought a suspension. The West Virginia Racing Commission issued the following ruling: "At a meeting of the commission, Trainer Sam J. Gilman, who applied for a license and was refused, was indefinitely suspended for striking an official of the commission, as well as using abusive language and issuing threats of bodily harm.

The incident is alleged to have taken place Saturday morning when Andrew R. Winters, steward representing the commission was hearing applicants for trainer licenses.

The card opened with a photo finish in which inches separated C. B. Carter's Petronel and William Zakoor's Impeller. It was a narrow squeak, indeed, for the favorite players who took down a $4.60 win mutuel.

The camera had to swing into action at the end of the fourth event. V. J. Stevens' Tunesmith got up in the last jump to take a lip margin victory from Basil A. Hall sr.'s Bee A. H. This winner paid $16.40. The fifth also made the judges call for a picture which showed A. T. Allen's Unaided the winner by a neck over H. M. Simpson's Sea Weather. The filly paid $12.40.

Bill Bennings

AT CHARLES TOWN.

DEAR FOLKS:

Darrell Hartley, apprentice sensation at Bowie, has been suffering from a cold and will get back into action on the Wednesday card. Sammy Palumbo says he expects to ride a few horses during the meeting. Won't try the eight-a-day pace he set in his youth, however. Agent Max Pierson, of Washington, has taken over the management of Jockey Vernon Bush. After this session Jockey Nick Shuk will go to his Illinois home for Christmas before reporting at Hialeah where he will ride for Valley View Farm. Mrs. Sylvia Hewitt's Frank Moose, a minor track champion, is reported to have been the only insured horse to die in the Marlboro fire. For this reason, his owner is being declared out of the distribution of funds raised to aid those who lost horoses and equipment. Mrs. Hewitt says the insurance was not ample, however, and wants to be cut in. BILL.

Don Eagle Defends 'Title'

Folks at Turner's Arena tomorrow night will have a chance to see if wrestling really has been given back to the Indians.

Don Eagle, full-blooded Indian whose dad, Chief War Eagle, heads a tribe in the Canadian province of Quebec, defends his version of the "world's championship" against Gene (Mr. America) Stanlee.

Don Eagle claimed the title last June when he pinned Frank Sexton. Before that he wrestled Antonino Rocca to a draw.

A somewhat stellar supporting card has been lined up for what's being heralded as the best wrestling show around here for some time. Nell Stewart, wrestling's own Dagmar, meets Ella Waldek; Andre Drapp (alias Mr. Europe) opposes Jim Lewis and a two-man team match involves Roland Meeker and Ken Ackles vs. Laverne Baxter and Jack Dillon.

Senate Sets Friday For Warrants Ruling

The Senate yesterday told its Judiciary Committee to say by Friday what it wants done with the proposal to arrest 11 key witnesses for the Kefauver crime probe committee.

Chairman Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), head of the investigating committee, also won agreement for the Senate to act Friday on the Judiciary report.

Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) is expected at the Capitol today. His office said he was traveling by train from Chicago to Washington last night.

The Judiciary Committee review of the Kefauver committee's demand for Senate warrants for arrest of the 11 unfound witnesses was engineered by Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.).

"Delaying Tactic" Hit

Lucas had steered the Kefauver request to the Judiciary group Monday. Kefauver sought yesterday to reconsider the action, but dropped that move when Lucas proposed the Friday deadline for the Judiciary report.

Before agreeing on the Friday deadline,, Kefauver described as a "delaying tactic" the Lucas move for Judiciary Committee review of the request for arresting witnesses.

"This is not a delaying action," Lucas retorted. "I have no more use for the crooks he (Kefauver) is trying to find than he has."

Both Lucas and Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) said they were concerned that the method of arrests proposed by Kefauver could become a precedent for arresting innocent persons.

Previous Warrants Cited

Saltonstall said previous Senate arrested, cited by Kefauver as precedents for his proposal, were made where witnesses had been supenaed and had either refused to appear or refused to answer questions.

In contrast, he pointed out, the witnesses sought by the Kefauver committee have not been subpenaed.

But Kefauver said there is no doubt the 11 witnesses know they are wanted and have "secreted themselves. He also explained that a subpena is handed to one person to serve, while warrants can enlist the full machinery of Federal law enforcement agencies to bring in the wanted witnesses.

He said if the investigating committee cannot get Justice Department help in bringing n the key witnesses, "the order of the Senate to make an investigation simply cannot be carried out."

Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.) asked why the committee had not ordered Sergeant at Arms Joseph Duke to "bring those bums in." Kefauver said in view of the objections raised to having the Senate order the warrants there would have been "strenuous objection' to the committee's issuing such an order directly.

At one point, Lucas predicted the committee would be seeking another $300,000 or $400,000 next year to "really get the job done," and he added, "I am sure the request will be granted."

Gunmen Blame Arrest on 'Double Cross'

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 5 (U.P.). Six Chicago gunmen who stole $12,000 in a leisurely 4½-hour holdup of a Mississippi gambling club last night complained today that a "double cross" led to their capture three hours later.

W. E. Crawford, chief of the State highway patrol in west Tennessee, said the men grumbled that another man "got us down here to do the job and said the way was paved . . . Somebody sold us out."

Crawford and four other highway patrolmen made the arrests after waiting outside the Colony Club in Tipton County, Tenn., for several hours in near-freezing weather. When the gunmen drove up shortly before 1 a. m. (EST) they found themselves covered by automatic weapons from four directions. They cried, "Don't shoot," held their hands high, and surrendered quietly.

Crawford explained the well-planned capture simply by saying the highway patrol had "had an eye on those men and that car" for several days.

The six men were held in lieu of $90,000 bail on Federal charges of carrying dangerous weapons across State lines.

Police also arrested Jimmy Nix, of Memphis, owner of the now-closed Colony Club, and a companion for questioning on the theory that the night club might have been used as headquarters for the holdup. Nix and his companion, George Roberts, were freed on $5000 bond each.

The gunmen entered the lavish dining and gaming rooms of the Kennel Club at Byhalia Miss, 25 miles southeast of here, about 5 p. m., just when the customers were beginning to arrive.

They lined customers and employes in chairs against the walls and forced them to drop their valuables on the fiooor. They even offered to serve the customers refreshments while they waited for late arrivals to fleece. At 9:30 they fled.

French Vote Amnesty For Collaborators

PARIS, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The National Assembly approved a bill of amnesty for World War II collaborators early today after an all-night debate culminating a year's political wrangling. The vote was 336 to 263.

The complicated law will reduce prison sentences and civil penalties against thousands of Frenchmen convicted of collaboration with the Germans. But it will not affect the punishment of serious offenders, such as Gen. Phillipe Petain, who were condemned by the French Supreme Court, or who were condemned to death or life imprisonment.

TO SECURITY HOLDERS OF:

Missouri Pacific Railroad Co.
New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway Co.
International-Great Northern Railway Co.

For a Quick Reorganization—a Just One

YOUR securities have a true value in excess of what you are offered under the plan of reorganization on which you will be asked to vote about December 1st.

You should vote "Reject" on the ballot about to be mailed to you by the Interstate Commerce Commission. By doing so you will get more for your securities than if you vote "Accept." And you will get it sooner.

The claims of bondholders for principal and accrued Interest are good in full. There is no reason for bondholders to accept less than par and the accrued interest due them, or its equivalent.

The following table shows the present market value of the securities which are being offered you in contrast with the true value of your claim:

	Market Value of Securities You Are Offered Under Present Plan(a)	True Value of Your Securities(b)
MISSOURI PACIFIC:
First & Refunding 5s	115	137
General Mortgage 4s	101	172
Secured Serial 5¼s	139	191
Convertible 5½s	63	195
Preferred Stock	6	60
Common Stock	0	20
NEW ORLEANS, TEXAS & MEXICO:
First Mortgage Bonds: These bonds under the plan are offered securities "worth par." Aetually your present high coupon securities are worth more than par.
Common Stock	121	170(c)
INT'L-GREAT NORTHERN:
First Mortgage Bonds	100	143
Adjustment Mortgage 6s	56	100(d)

(a) Based on "when issued" prices.
(b) Based on the face amounts of bondholders claims, and the indicated earning power for the equities.
(c) Indicated value of the common stock freed from the Courts.
(d) Based on indicated earning power.

The same group of Insurance Company executives that strove to put over the so-called "Stedman Plan" of reorganization of the Missouri Pacific back in 1941 again advises you to "accept" a bad deal. You should ignore this prejudiced and interested advice, just as you ignored it in 1941.

In our advertisements and letters to you at that time we warned you of a vital defect, which they sought to gloss over, that the "Stedman Plan" would strip the railroad of its most priceless asset—its tax exemptions and tax base as then constituted. We said:

"Missouri Pacific (exclusive of subsidiaries) has present basic interest requirements of $20,726,000 which are now totally exempt from the normal Federal income tax and surtax of approximately 31%, whereas under Mr. Stedman's plan only $10,029,174 of fixed and contingent interest exemption is provided. Thus, by unwisely seeking to make its new securities stocks instead of bonds, the 'Stedman' plan would automatically and unnecessarily transfer from the treasury of the Missouri Pacific to the Federal tax collectors approximately 31% of the $10,696,000 difference in bond interest exemption, or $3,300,000. The above calculation is made as though no excess profits tax were in effect.

"So long as the excess profits tax remains in effect the loss to Missouri Pacific because of the 'Stedman' plan becomes even greater. In reducing the company's invested capital base by substituting stocks for bonds, Mr. Stedman would obligate the company to huge excess profits taxes which are not incurred under the present capitalization. . . . By blindly scuttling approximately $300,000,000 of the capital base of the present company under the plan he sponsors, Mr. Stedman would gratuitously incur an excess profits tax liability of approximately $7,000,000, based on 1941 earning."

Your decision to reject the Stedman 1941 plan was rewarded by savings in taxes which have since aggregated $65,000,000. It was with the help of such savings that the following debt was retired:

Underlying bonds	$14,000,000
Iron Mountain bonds	34,500,000
RFC and RCC	28,000,000
Bank loans	5,800,000
N.O.T. & M. Incomes	2,300,000
Other miscellaneous	6,400,000
TOTAL	$91,000,000

Just as the normal Federal income tax of 31% back in 1941 now looks small, some day the present 45% tax may seem so. As the war advances, and to pay its cost in the peace that follows, the railroad may face taxation of earnings after bond interest at the 85% level of the last war for many years. Therefore when you are asked to accept stocks, dividends on which are not deductible for tax purposes by the railroad, in exchange for all or part of your bonds, the interest on which is wholly deductible for tax purposes by the railroad, you are blandly being asked to commit financial suicide, by your own vote.

The Insurance Companies Still Regard the Missouri Pacific System as a "Dust Bowl" Railroad

The "normal year" earnings estimate of the Missouri Pacific System as fixed by the ICC and acquiesced in by the Insurance Companies away back in the 1937 "dust bowl" era was $22,060,000. How much do you think this estimate has since been liberalized after 13 years of new and staggering evidence? Just $3,390,000! Considerably less than the interest saved through the debt retirements shown above!

Since the 1941 plan was defeated, earnings have exceeded $30,000,000 after all taxes in every year except 1949 when the system suffered the most disastrous strike in recent railroad history. Even in that manifestly subnormal year the earnings exceeded $29,000,000 as compared with the "normal year" estimate of $25,450,000 on which the present plan is based. The average annual earnings of the System over this ten-year period were $40,000,000. Earnings this year will approach $40,000,000. This compares with over-all interest requirements of $22,000,000 on the existing debt.

And by the Trustee's own estimates, complete dieselization should bring many millions of additional earnings.

The Missouri Pacific Is Rich in Assets to Which the Plan of Reorganization Gives Inadequate Recognition

Cash and government securities in the amount of $103,000,000 are held in various accounts of the Missouri Pacific System. This is $100,000,000 in excess of the cash and government securities which were held in the System early in 1931, when the Interstate Commerce Commission approved the sale of $61,000,000 First Refunding 5% bonds as being in the public interest.

Many of these bonds were bought by the same insurance companies who say that the railroad which was then solvent is now bankrupt.

Let us see how the Missouri Pacific of 1950 compares with the Missouri Pacific of 1931 in other respects. Not only has debt in the sum of $91,000,000 been retired since 1931 but $200,000,000 net has been expended in roadway and other capital improvements, and for new equipment, after allowances for all retirements. In the maintenance account $800,000,000 has been spent. Rails, ties, ballast and buildings have all been brought up to higher standards at your expense.

In addition, the System holds the following railroad and non-railroad investments which have greatly increased in value since 1931:

	CURRENT VALUE
Texas & Pacific Railroad Co. Preferred	$23,000,000
Texas & Pacific Railroad Co. Common	19,000,000
Missouri-Illinois Railroad Co.	5,000,000
Other railroad investments*	26,000,000
American Refrigerator Transit Co.	15,000,000
Missouri Pacific Railroad Transportation Co.	4,500,000
Seatrain Lines, Inc.	1,500,000
Western Coal & Mining Co.	2,500,000
Grain elevators, real estate, etc.	10,000,000
TOTAL	$106,500,000

* Eliminating Missouri Pacific's holdings of New Orleans, Texas & Mexico stock.

The Texas & Pacific common stock, for example, in 1931 sold at $22 per share. Today it sells around $80 per share. Is there the slightest reason to believe that the Missouri Pacific property, like other railway properties in the Southwest, is not worth more now than it was in 1931?

The general cost level has so increased since 1931 that to replace your property today, it would have to be bonded at over one billion dollars. For example, the ICC's own railroad construction cost index for 1949 was 282, up from its 1931 figure of 149. Yet you are asked to approve a plan which carries only $377,000,000 of non-equipment debt when the very same people who urge you to sacrifice yourselves thought the vastly inferior 1931 property could support a non-equipment debt of $488,000,000.

Thus, property values get no more recognition under the current Insurance Company "dust bowl" plan than do earnings. In the light of some recent events, one is not too surprised to find an anti-private-property viewpoint in Washington but he hardly expects to encounter it in Wall Street.

If the Missouri Pacific is not good for its bonds today, then a fraud was put over on the Insurance Companies and the public by the ICC and the bankers in 1931. The Insurance Companies must make their choice. They either allowed themselves to be defrauded then or they are failing to protect their policyholders now.

The New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Is Solvent

Although the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway, like the Missouri Pacific, has been in bankruptcy now for 18 years, actually, it is solvent. The railroad has paid up all of the interest due on its publicly held bonds. These bonds could long ago have been refunded at substantially lower interest rates to the benefit of all other security holders if your Trustee (in his conflicting, and now untenable, position as Trustee of the above three railroads), and the Insurance group had not been committed to the "dust bowl" plan.

The undersigned believe that on numerous occasions since 1941 the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico could have been brought out of bankruptcy on its own resources—if not, certainly with Missouri Pacific's help, just as the St. Louis Southwestern was brought out of bankruptcy back in 1947 with the help of its parent, the Southern Pacific.

Alleghany Corporation is now organizing a group to bring the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico out of its unnecessarily continued bankruptcy, and if its perfectly feasible program receives the reasonable cooperation of the investment bankers, this move in itself will defeat the current plan and clear the way for a new and fair Mahaffie Act Plan.

One Quick Way to Reorganization—Only

The only quick way to get the Missouri Pacific out of the Courts is to "reject" the present plan, and for all parties at interest to get together immediately to sponsor the simple readjustments necessary to proceed under the Mahaffie Act. The Mahaffie Act was passed by Congress in 1948 for reasons best described in its Committee report, to wit:

"as a result of increasing dissatisfaction over a period of years by Members of Congress and by large numbers of citizens with the operation of railroad reorganization procedures under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act and sharp criticism of the forfeitures of investments under that section."

A Mahaffie Act Plan Will Preserve Your Values

The Mahaffie Act was passed by Congress in 1948 with the express idea of correcting injustices under Section 77. Just as the Jersey Central in a period of a few months was brought out of Section 77 under a Mahaffie Act Plan, so can the Missouri Pacific be brought out. Why is it that the Insurance Companies regard what is good for the Jersey Central as bad for the Missouri Pacific?

As for the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico

As indicated above, steps are being taken which will cause the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico to be discharged from bankruptcy without any reorganization whatever. This will preserve the full value of the present New Orleans, Texas & Mexico bonds with their existing coupons, and will preserve the full equity of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico stock.

As for the International-Great Northern

We shall submit an up-to-date plan of reorganization for the International-Great Northern based upon today's earning power and recognizing today's tax problems. It will maintain, or largely maintain, the fixed-interest status of the International-Great Northern First Mortgage bonds which would be all but sacrificed under the present plan. It will be of unmistakable benefit to the holders of the International-Great Northern Adjustment 6s who are given nothing but stock under the present plan.

And as for the Missouri Pacific

In so far as the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company is concerned, the Debtor proposes a simple Mahaffie Act plan. Here is the way the company's security holders would fare under that plan in contrast with the treatment they are asked to take under the present Section 77 plan.

THE POSITION OF ARBITRAGEURS: The arbitrageurs, who have bought System securities and sold "when issued" securities against them will be benefited by voting "REJECT" no less than other security holders. These arbitrageurs have already benefited in their "long" position by recent rumors of the favorable developments presaged by this message to you. They should be gratified to be relieved of their "short" position which has moved against them, and promises to move against them much farther.

WARNING: Insurance companies, bankers and brokers having special interests in the situation, and especially brokers with profits in when issued securities, will advise you to "accept" the present plan. The chief argument of these "advisors" will be that the railroad has been in reorganization long enough. Heaven knows we know it! The truth is, the present plan is not yet so far along as the 1941 plan was nine years ago; for, besides ourselves, there are ten other determined appellants, whose cases, like ours, are in many respects stronger than they were then.

GOP Takes Over Prince Georges; Gets Broom Going

Police Chief Ousted; New Appointments Made; Latimer Is Board President

Prince Georges County's new Republican Commissioners were sworn in yesterday afternoon and they promptly made a number of administrative changes.

The oath of office was administered by Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury in ceremonies in the circuit court room of the Marlboro Courthouse.

The first official act of the new board was to elect Thomas E. Latimer, Glenn Dale surveyor, as its full-time president. He will be the first commissioner to serve on a full-time basis.

Other members of the new board are Daniel A. Abbott, Camp Springs real estate man; W. Everett Marton, Laurel tax accountant; H. Wilson Spicknall, Hyattsville insurance man, and Edward J. Waters of Berwyn Heights, a foreman for heavy equipment installation company.

Reading from a prepared script and in rapid order, the commissioners:

1. Named Adrian P. Fisher, Oxon Hill attorney, as county attorney to replace Jerrold V. Powers. The resignations of Powers and Assistant County Attorney Robert B. Mathias were accepted earlier.

2. Appointed Thomas F. Hicks, Takoma Park insurance man, as clerk to the commissioners. No official action was taken regarding the incumbent, Linden Briscoe, but the commissioners indicated he would be retained as an assistant, at least until next September when he becomes eligible for retirement.

3. "Terminated the services" of Police Superintendent Ralph W. Brown and designated Lieut. Roscoe C. Sines, commanding officer of the Hyattsville station, as acting superintendent "until further orders."

4. Appointed County Treasurer-elect Julian B. McKay as assistant to County Treasurer James B. Bland until McKay assumes office on April 1.

5. Abolished the post of secretary to the Board of Police Commissioners, the position held by Mrs. Betty Tayman, who was told by the commissioners she may apply for another county job. Her duties were given to the commissioner's clerk.

From now on the commissioners will meet every Tuesday and Friday, in accordance with provisions of the Sothoron Act, which reorganized the county government.

Spicknall, who served as temporary chairman before the election of Latimer, promised the gathering the board would fulfill the pledges made by the Republican Party during its campaign.

The new commissioners, he said, "have firmly resolved to give Prince Georges County something we have needed far too long—good, clean, efficient government.

Walter F. Mulligan, veteran president of the County Civic Federation, said the GOP victory "was won by an aroused and informed electorate over an arrogant machine (which) in its blindness failed to see the handwriting on the wall," he said.

Brown, ousted as police chief after eight years, commented: "It's just the spoils of war."

Compulsory Service Urged By Menninger

The Nation should revise its draft system to require every youth of 18 to spend anywhere from one to three years in some capacity in the service of his country.

Dr. William C. Menninger, director of the Menninger Foundation of Topeka, Kans., and former top Army psychiatrist, yesterday advocated this step as the "best answer" to the present "vicious policies" of selecting college students for selective service on the basis of their scholastic standards, and to the blundering discrimination of the Selective Service system.

Dr. Menninger spoke at a panel on the influence of mobilization and war on youth at which youth itself participated in yesterday's sessions of the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth.

To his complaint that the present system of selecting draftees makes the youth of draft age uncertain as to his own future, Miss Dorothy Stratton, national executive director-elect of the Girl Scouts, added her own conviction that more thought needs to be given to the role of young women in total mobilization.

She said she had informally questioned girls of high school and college age and had found many college girls who think the war would have no direct impact on their own lives; many who thought we had no business fighting in Korea and should get out.

Marian McSurely, 17, of 4626 Carlin Springs rd., Arlington, a youth delegate, admitted, "We're scared. We feel insecure in relation to adults because what they are doing doesn't seem to be the right thing.

"We look around and ask 'Who got us into this mess, anyhow?' We look around at our adults and realize they are just as confused as we are.

District Red Tape On Bidding Costs $20-a-Month Loss

Parking Lot Operator D. F. Antonelli has reason to believe the old sayings that everything comes to those who wait.

A couple of months ago Antonelli asked the District to rent to him for $25 a month a 31-foot strip from the old Toner School property next to his parking lot at 24th and F sts. nw. The Commissioners decided, however, that they should ask for bids on it.

They did so, but when the bids were opened there was just one—from Antonelli for $5 a month. Yesterday at the advice of Auditor Arthur R. Pilkerton the Commissioners accepted Antonelli's bid at $20 a month less than he had originally offered.

Atomic Age Affects Parents As Well as Children, Panel Told

"Why shouldn't adults be unpredictable?"

That was the question raised yesterday by Mrs. Evelyn Millis Duvall, executive secretary of the National Council on Family Relations, at a White House conference panel on symptoms and causes of conflict between youth and adults.

A delegate had just questioned this "unpredictability" of adults in their relationship with youth.

"Adults," said Mrs. Duvall, "are just as bewildered and puzzled with their new tasks, as are young people. Parents, especially middle-aged parents, are facing all kinds of new situations. They have never lived in an atomic age before, either."

Mrs. Duvall cited the case of middle-aged mother who "dreads waking up in the morning because I don't know what I'll fill my day with."

Mrs. Duvall pointed out that this middle-aged mother, and many like her, are waking up to find that the job for which they prepared themselves—raising children—has been ended. "They have reached the point where their children are in school, and don't need them any more.

"They are among the people who are asking, 'Who am I?'—'Where am I going?'

Leon H. Richman, of the Bellefaire Regional Child Care Service, Cleveland, said another problem of the middle-aged parent is that he doesn't know what it's like to be 40. And he doesn't always remember what it was like to be 20."

Negro Beset by Higher Prices In All Fields, Educator Says

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Negro families on the economic borderline of a $3000 yearly income must pay beyond their means for rent and food, Forrester B. Washington, director of the Atlanta University School of Social work, yesterday told a conference group at the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Washington said Negro families are unable to make the proper contributions to their children because a disproportionate part of the income must go for rent and food.

"It costs the Negro family more to live than the white family with the same income," Washington declared.

Landlords in the District will take an apartment that rented for $60 a month when occupied by a white family and subdivide it and charge Negroes as much as $75 a room, he said. As a result, he added, Negro families must double up.

Grocery stores change character as soon as Negro families move into a neighborhood, he said. Inferior canned goods and poor meats replace good merchandise on shelves and refrigerators he said, adding that the cost of food rises although quality has dropped.

In the South, the self-respecting Negro of average income must pay Pullman rates "if he is to avoid the filth of a Jim Crow car," Washington said.

The panel at which Washington spoke was one of a half dozen at the conference to probe the problem of prejudice and its effect on the personality of a child growing up in a minority group.

Psychiatry's Gain Declared Religion's Loss

Psychiatry might never have made headway, if religion had maintained its hold on the people, a leading rabbi told a panel group at the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth yesterday.

"Religion affects basically the same factors the psychiatrist tries to treat—the emotional well being of the individual," Rabbi Uri Miller, of the Synagogue Council of America, said.

"The development of psychiatry may never have taken place," he declared, "if people generally had remained religious."

Rabbi Miller's theme concerned the spiritual value which, he said, are necessary for the wholesome development of a child's personality.

The Very Rev. Msgr. John J. McClafferty of Catholic University's National Catholic School of Social Work, characterized religion as "far from being the dope of the people," but actually "the hope of the people."

"Yet how many people in the world refuse to acknowledge, use and practice religion?" Msgr. McClafferty asked, adding:

"Or, if they, in their smug complacency and arrogant self-sufficiency, condescend to use religion, they use it like a trolley car, only when and while it is going in their direction."

Another panel member, the Rev. Raymond B. Johnson, pastor of the First (Unitarian) Parish Church, Hingham, Mass., stressed the need for "a common denominator" in religious teaching of youth.

"I am appalled by the report that half the children of the United States are not connected—even nominally—with any religious institution," Dr. Johnson said. "We ought to broaden the base of our conception of religion.

"We should not teach the youth how to pray, or even when to pray," the minister warned, "but we should help them develop a way of life built around the common goals of all religion."

Parents Who Allow Children TV Control Held Negligent

By Dorothea Cruger
Post Reporter

Parents who allow their children complete control over what television programs to watch are negligent, Robert Saudak, vice-president of the American Broadcasting Co., told a panel meeting yesterday at the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth.

But before he and the other panelists were through, parents and teen-agers in the audience had a few questions and comments to hurl at them.

"What would you do with three children who outvote their parents in choice of programs?" asked a Nebraska father.

"And what about rural communities where we don't get the best in programs, but only what local sponsors want to give us?" asked a Maine mother of four children.

To the Nebraskan, Saudak, father of four, replied, "We give each youngster an allotted time for listening, and we try to steer him to the best in that hour." And to the lady from Maine, he replied, "If enough of the audience wrote the networks to ask for what they wanted to hear they would get the good programs."

He cited the number of letters written approving broadcasts and telecasts of U. N. meetings which encouraged stations to continue these programs.

Pro and con discussion from the audience was equally lively in regard to other entertainment media. One mother from Montana declared: "In my town we have only one newspaper and it's biased, so we don't read it. We don't get good radio programs so we don't listen. We don't get good movies so we stay away from the theater. And most of us don't have TV.

"We have a solution. We read a lot. And we think we're a lot better off for it!"

Here are some of the other audience comments that came out of the meeting:

On comic books: "I use them as a springboard to lure children to deeper subjects," said a mother. "They're already interested in what they're reading and from there it's just a jump to dicussing why scientists want to get to the moon, or why nations fight each other," she said.

On advertising: "I think it's disgusting to see a basketball player we kids all admire advocating a certain brand of beer," said one teen-ager.

On newspapers and radio commentators: "How do we go about getting the truth, and not just colored presentation of facts? We have only one paper in our town and it's not objective," said one parent.

On television: "Kids are spending as much time with their sets as they do at school, and if they don't have a set, they watch their neighbor's. It doesn't require anything of him and it doesn't usually give him anything," stated one Philadelphia youth.

Altogether it was stimulating, and at times rather rough going for the panel of experts, who included Douglas Larsen of the Newspaper Enterprise Association, Otis Wiese, editor of McCall's; Dean Bruce Mahan, of the Iowa State College Extension Service, and Allen Dibble, of March of Time.

Country Wastes Large Part Of Manpower, Davis Says

the proportion of the population which has skill is "by recruiting more children who are poor but smart. That is an urgent national requirement.

"If we do not find, and train effectively, more of these children with quick minds in the vast lower . . . groups in America, we shall be very seriously challenged by the tremendous populations of Asia and Eastern Europe," Dr. Davis said.

Dr. Davis started off a busy third day for White House conferees which included an address by President Truman and wound up last night with reports by the advisory councils which have worked closely with the national committee in preparing for the conference.

During the day, delegates listened again to panel discussions during the morning, and in the afternoon began the involved task of drafting preliminary recommendations and "findings of fact" in the special fields they are studying. These reports will be revamped today in more committee work.

Last night, Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, in an address on how the Federal Government serves youth, declared:

"As the Federal Government increases its impact upon community and family life, because of the character and urgency of the problems we face, it becomes more than ever necessary that cooperative relations between the Federal Government, the States, and voluntary organizations be strengthened, and that the primary reliance on the family and the local community in the rearing of children and the education and training of youth be maintained."

Truman Sees 'Grave Risk' Of Third World War

Youth Conference Told Expansion Of Armed Forces Insures U. S. Survival

President Truman yesterday accused Chinese Communist leaders of "deliberately" causing a "grave risk" of general war but said their action "does not change our fundamental purpose to work for the cause of a just and peaceful world."

"No matter how the immediate situation may develop, we must remember that the fighting in Korea is but one part of the tremendous struggle of our time—the struggle between freedom and Communist slavery."

Speaking before a capacity audience attending the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth, Mr. Truman warned the youths attending that conference that "we cannot insulate our children from the uncertainties of the world in which we live or from the impact of the problems which confront us all."

The President hurried into the National Guard Armory shortly after 10 a. m., surrounded by Secret Service men, and Metropolitan police. He made his address to the conference between talks with British Prime Minister Clement Attlee.

Mr. Truman placed special emphasis on the fact that the Korean fighting is not an effort of the United States alone.

"Our problem and our objective is to build a world order based on freedom and justice. We have worked with the free nations to lay the foundations of such a world order in the United Nations. We must remain firm in our commitment to the United Nations.

"That is the only way out of an endless circle of force and retaliation, violence and war—which will carry the human race back to the dark ages if it's not stopped now. And this is a point that we must make sure our children and young people understand."

He warned that the Communist threat means strengthening of the Nation's military defenses.

"We are now engaged," he said, "in a great program of rearmament. This will change the lives of our young people. A great many of them will have to devote some part of their lives to service in our armed forces or other defense activities.

"In no other way," he underlined, "can we insure our survival as a nation."

The President said the threat of international communism is "obviously a military threat. The Communist-dominated countries are maintaining large military forces—far larger than they could possibly need for peaceful purposes. And they have shown by their actions in Korea that they will not hesitate to use these forces in armed aggression whenever it suits their evil purposes.

Mr. Truman told delegates at the Conference that previous conferences "have made our democracy work better." As one of the conference goals, he said:

"Our teachers—and all others who deal with our young people—should place uppermost the need for making our young people understand our free institutions and the values on which they rest. We must fight against mortal cynicism—the materialistic view of life—on which communism feeds.

"We must teach the objectives that lie behind our institutions, and the duty of all our citizens to make those institutions work more perfectly. Nothing is more important than this.

"And nothing this conference can do will have a greater effect on the world struggle against communism than spelling out ways in which our young people can better understand our democratic institutions. We must teach them why we must fight, when necessary, to defend our democratic institutions. We must teach them our belief in

More Rain and Snow Promised for Area

There should be rain this afternoon and snow tonight, the Weather Bureau reported yesterday.

As swollen rivers and streams in Maryland and Virginia receded swiftly from earlier rain and snow, forecasters predicted temperatures in the District today of between 30 and 40 degrees.

The cold rain and snow is being brought here by a storm from Louisiana and the Midwest.

The Potomac River between Washington and Harpers Ferry was due to reach its crest there at 18 feet—flood stage—last night.

At the gauge above Chain Bridge, the crest was expected early this morning at 13 or 14 feet, highest since the 13 feet gauged in June of 1949. Ten feet is flood stage at that point, but weather observers said there was no serious damage from the high water.

Flooding in Virginia was confined largely to smaller streams. The Rappahannock at Fredericksburg was at 17 feet yesterday, but damage is never appreciable below 20. The Shenandoah was at 18.5 feet at its crest, with flood stage 22.

The Monocacy River in Maryland started flooding in low spots yesterday morning, but was "dropping rapidly" by afternoon, observers reported.

The outlook for this area was colder weather Thursday, followed by fair and cold weather Friday and warmer temperatures over the weekend.

In Gambling Case

Grand Jury Examines Defendants

A grand jury is investigating the gambling case in which Robbery Squad Lieut. George E. (Two-Gun) Cooper is a key witness, United States Attorney George Morris Fay revealed yesterday.

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett last week ordered his own investigation into the case and the role played by Cooper in the arrest of Louis and Esther Gitelson, 1116 Buchanan st. nw., on charges of setting up a gaming table.

The case against the Gitelsons was continued in Municipal Court yesterday for two weeks, after their attorney, Denny Hughes, said it would be "wasting time and effort" to hold a preliminary hearing since the case had already been presented to the grand jury.

The Gitelsons were arrested November 28 on a warrant sworn to by a friend of Cooper, James J. Martin, 2531 14th st. ne., resident manager of the Brentwood Village Apartments.

In his application for a warrant, Martin said he had telephoned $120 worth of horse race bets to Mrs. Gitelson eight days earlier in Cooper's presence. In his signed statement concerning the case, Cooper said he accompanied Martin to the Gitelson home later in the day, and there, he said, Gitelson admitted taking $828 worth of bets from Martin in the previous week.

After Barrett ordered his investigation, Cooper said the Gitelsons complained about his role in the case in an effort to avoid prosecution.

Hughes said yesterday that the Gitelsons were subpoenaed before the grand jury Friday. It is most unusual for defendants in a case to be subpoenaed to testify in that case.

Fay would not say how much of the Gitelson case had been presented to the grand jury, nor whether the presentment had been completed.

A top assistant United States attorney has been appointed to handle one part of the Gitelson case, Fay said, in addition to the regular assistant assigned to handle presentment of the case before the grand jury. He is Charles B. Murray, who would say only that he is handling "a collateral aspect of the Gitelson case."

The police investigation of Cooper's role in the case is being handled by Inspector Robert V. Murray, chief of detectives. Murray said his investigation is still incomplete.

Critics' Forum Thursday

The Critics' Forum will present the Rev. E. Robert Arthur, of St. Matthew's Cathedral, in a review of Evelyn Waugh's book, "Helena," at 8:30 p. m. Thursday in the Mayflower Hotel. Caesar Aiello, Washington attorney, will act as chairman.

'Untrained' Fund Raiser Criticized

What are you going to do about the big businessman who knows how to raise money for community projects and then insists on directing how the money will be spent?

One panel of the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth tried to figure out the answer to this yesterday. They didn't get very far.

A delegate from a large eastern city posed the problem. He explained that in almost every American community there is a citizen untrained in social work "who is a well wisher and can raise money. But because he can do this, he thinks he is entitled to keep his finger in the pie once the funds are raised.

"He's the man who is too busy to attend board meetings where social agencies find out, from case work reports, where money is badly needed. And he won't find out. Yet he can raise money and he wants a say in how it is spent. And if you put together all the people in a community who do not know where the money should be spent, you'd never make a campaign quota."

The panel decided that the big businessman needs to be told that he has a special talent in one field — raising money; that he should feel that is his contribution to his community and concentrate only on that.

the right of the individual, our belief in God."

Mr. Truman said he was "no expert" on the Conference goals but that he believed if children have a good home and good teachers in the first few grades of school "they are well started on the way toward being useful and honorable citizens."

He departed from his prepared text to prove this point:

"I have always considered my mother and my father my first great influence. I was lucky to pick the right mother and father. I always considered my first and second grade teachers made an immense contribution to what I have become."

President Truman also made an unscheduled defense of welfare workers. He said that when he was "running the county at home," there was a welfare department and he thought an expert was needed to help with its work.

President Truman said he found a "couple of fine women" to help. One of the county officials then complained: "Judge, I don't think this thing is going to work. I find these experts of yours never washed a dish of pinned a diaper in their life."

"But," Mr. Truman added, "It did work. It was a very satisfactory outcome we had in that welfare department."

Mr. Truman also stressed the fact that the Nation believes "in self-reliant individuals. That is the goal of our system of education and training—and that is the goal of this Conference."

In pointing out that the country cannot insulate its children from the world's uncertainties, Mr. Truman also stated, "What we can do —and what we must do—is to equip them to meet these problems, to do their part in the total effort, and to build up those inner resources of character which are the main strength of the American people."

High School Curricula Revised to Fit Jobs

Some communities are making efforts to determine exactly what kind of jobs are available for their high school graduates and are changing school courses on the basis of their findings.

This approach to helping America's youngster prepare for the business of making a living yesterday highlighted a panel discussion on suitable employment opportunities and good working conditions as factors in the development of youth at the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Donald Arnold, assistant regional representative, Bureau of Employment Security, suggested the approach to helping youth to a good start on their careers. He said that idea has been put into practical operation in nine Nebraska communities.

R. Maurice Moss, associate director, National Urban League, suggested three other approaches to the problem: development of sound ways to raise family income so that youths in low income families could complete their schooling; cooperative efforts on the part of school and industry to make it easier for the youth to make the jump from school to job and more widespread vocational guidance.

Marriage Counseling Increase Held Needed

Marriage was described yesterday as the "major career of life" and the speaker declared that "the home, the school, the church and all avenues of communication" should be employed to train youth for it.

Dr. Abraham Stone, president of the American Association of Marriage Counselors, told a panel group at the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth that youth today needs more counseling for marriage than the youth of a half century ago.

"Marriage and family life no longer are held together by the outside forces of law, religion, economics and social mores," he said.

"There must be an inner harmony if marriag is to succeed today and this inner harmony must must be strengthened," he declared.

Alphonse H. Clemens of the Catholic University department of sociology, said that the best counseling cannot replace a happy family life in preparing youth for marriage.

Conditions of family life which most influence children were listed by Clemens as religion in the home, well adjusted parents and emotional security.

W. S. Gordy, Salisbury Banker, Dies

SALISBURY, Md., Dec. 5 (AP).—William S. Gordy, 77, who had spent 55 years with the Salisbury National Bank and 12 years as State comptroller of Maryland, died today.

Ill for almost a year, he died in Peninsula General Hospital, which he had once served as president and helped expand.

Mr. Gordy ended his career as comptroller in 1936 to run for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination but failed to win it.

He was president of the bank at the time of his death and also a member of the Knights Templar, Elks and board of trustees for the Salisbury Award. The annual award was founded by the late G. Williams Phillips as recognition for the person who contributed most to the community.

In 1913 he became a cashier and in 1933 he assumed the presidency. He also became head of the insurance company his father had founded.

Mr. Gordy also was active in politics, once serving as a member of the Democratic State contral committee for Wicomico County.

Miss Holbrook Rites Set for Thursday at 4

Funeral rites for Miss Edna Fay Holbrook, 65, a Washington high school teacher for 27 years, will be held at 4 p. m. Thursday in Pumphrey's funeral home, 7557 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, Md. Burial will be private.

Miss Holbrook, who retired July 1, died Monday at her home, 3206 Wisconsin ave. nw.

She began teaching mathematics here in 1923, at the old Central High School, taught at Roosevelt from 1932-39 and had been on the Coolidge faculty the past 11 years. A native of Albany, N. Y., Miss Holbrook was a graduate of New York State Teachers' College. She received her master's degree in mathematics from George Washington University.

G. W. Carter, Warrenton Lawyer, Dies

WARRENTON, Va., Dec. 5 (AP). Clarence W. Carter, 55, Warrenton lawyer and former Fauquier County Commonwealth's attorney, died here today after a heart attack.

He had been attending a Circuit Court session during the morning and appeared to be in good health. He collapsed and died only a short while later at the Fauquier Club.

Mr. Carter first was appointed as Commonwealth's attorney January 1, 1927, to succeed the late B. Richards Glascock. He remained in office until January 1, 1944, choosing not to run for reelection in the 1943 voting.

He was a graduate of Warrenton High School and the law school at Washington and Lee University. He bagan his law practice in Fairfax County, but came here to make his home in 1920.

He saw service overseas during World War I with the Army and he was a member of the Home Guard organization in World War II.

Mr. Carter's first wife was the former Miss Evangeline Leech of Clifton Forge, who died in 1926. Seven years later he married Miss Elizabeth Henkel of Danville. She died in 1949.

Surviving are two sons, Franklin J. Carter and William H. Carter, both of Warrenton; two sisters and two brothers.

TO GLADDEN A CHILD'S HEART—Mrs. Mildred Nott, president of the Dollology Club, holds a few of the dolls the club is sending to the Sarah Denavure Murphy Home for orphan and indigent children. The dolls are going to children who have few toys

The Yule Log

Santa's Shadow Looms to Spur D. C. Club Entertainments

A GROWING AWARENESS of the nearness of the Yule season has set Washington women to celebrating.

Highlights of yesterday's Christmas parties was the National Society of Arts and Letters fete at the home of Mrs. Anne Archibold on Reservoir rd. Holly decorated the home of Mrs. Archibold and the NSAL afternoon program featured Christmas music.

Hugh Allen Wilson, who came to the Christmas meeting from Glens Falls, N. Y., was guest artist at the Aeolean organ. Mr. Wilson, who is the organist at the First Presbyterian Church in Glens Falls, is starting a concert tour.

Also on the program was Miss Shirley Winston, winner of the NSAL advanced voice scholarship donated by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney. Miss Winston was accompanied by Ruth Ferguson of the National Symphony Orchestra, and Helen Breismiester, who played the cello obligato.

Following this program, NSAL members joined in the Christmas caroling. Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. James E. Douglass, president of the society; Mrs. William McChesney Martin, jr., Mrs. William Waller Edwards, Mrs. Ludlow King and Mrs. W. Ridgely Chapline.

"A MERRY AMERICAN CHRISTMAS" musical will be presented by sophomore class members of St. John's College and girls from Immaculate Conception Academy at a Christmas meeting of the St. John's College Mothers' Club December 8. The meeting will be held at the school, 1225 Vermont ave., nw. at 8:15 p. m.

Mrs. Carlene Schmitt, author and director of the production, will be assisted by Mrs. Raymond Callahan, chairman of entertainment. Refreshments will be served following the business meeting and program.

"A TOY IS A THING too beautiful to play with." These words, seen in a Washington Post feature on July 9, started members of the Dollology Club in Washington to thinking.

They read about the Sarah Denavure Murphy Home for orphaned and indigent Negro children in Rockmart, Ga., where "Mother" Murphy has a tremendous problem trying to feed, clothe and educate 48 children with little outside help, and where toys are considered "too beautiful to play with."

The Dollology Club had an idea. They would dress dolls and send them to "Mother" Murphy. On Sunday, the club members gathered to pack their Christmas tidings. They sent 35 dolls and 40 books and a heart full of "Merry Christmas!"

With their good deed behind them, members will meet Saturday, 2 p. m., in the Alliance room of All Soul's Unitarian Church for their own gala Christmas party.

Girl, Who Is Youngest of Four Children, And Whose Wedding Day Is Drawing Closer, Feels Guilt Choked Because She Wants to Get Away From Widowed Mother

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am the youngest of four children and plan to be married shortly; but of recent months I have been choked with a sense of guilt, feeling that I am wronging my mother. She has been a widow for several years, is in her late fifties, has a very dependent nature, and wishes to live with me after I marry, but I am opposed.

Mother cannot live with any of her other children, all married, because their accommodations are very limited. She could share a home with another widowed friend, however; but she is feeding my guilt sense with frequent self-pitying innuendoes. She is in average health, but has had a very difficult life; and in trying to analyze my guilt feelings in relations to her, I realize they go back to my childhood and her pitying ways.

If mother lives with me after marriage, I feel my chances of happiness will be ruined, since our relationship isn't of the healthiest nature. Yet even if the family relationship were ideal, I wouldn't want to live with anybody's mother after marriage. But having decided to live separately from mother, I am beset with conflicts and inhibitions. I feel enslaved and cannot be myself; and I must rid myself of this complex, which isn't fair to my fiance. I love Angus dearly and he has been sympathetic up to a point, but he is beginning to feel the strain. He is beginning to think I am a "Mama's little girl."

Does mother's elderly, widowed status entitle her to special filial consideration? Does it give her the right to deny me a life of my own? Who is more important — the younger person with years of life ahead? Or the elderly person with only limited time left? Even now mother makes quite a demand on my time, on the plea that she is a widow. And if I refuse her because I have a special engagement with someone else, I feel I am doing wrong—although an inner voice says I am justified.

As you can see, I am constantly at loggerheads with myself about mother. I have spoken to several persons about this, but the mental block refuses to lift. Should I feel guilty about living separately from mother after I marry? Am I in the wrong? I no longer know what is right, and I am turning to you in desperation. I cannot afford psychiatric help, so please give me your impartial viewpoint. C. N.

DEAR C. N.: Individual trends of behavior, individual patterns of feeling and thinking—what we call character or personality—are pre-eminently the product of emotional conditioning in one's formative years, a period which starts at birth and continues through adolescence. Emotional conditioning which establishes unconscious (or fundamental) attitudes, is vastly more influential than verbal teaching, in its effects on human behavior.

In his helpless vulnerable early years, the individual is most intimately associated with and dependent upon his mother—or a substitute mothering person. By virtue of the child's deficiencies, dependent relationship to this maternal personage, regardless of whether she is "fit," she becomes the principal source of administrator of his basic emotional conditioning. And if her influence continues dominant and unbroken in his formative years, and is of a neurotic, self-pitying, reproachful brand, her "child" is going to be seized, or throttled by, pessimistic guilt feelings whenever, in later life, he wants or undertakes to act contrary to her wishes.

So indelibly durable and tenaciously strong is the ingrained mother-influence that some specialists graphically illustrate its potency by saying that all through life individuals in all their added relationships are still "reacting" pro or con to the mother-figure — and not to the immediate person or situation. Some exceptions can be made to this — in the case of persons who painfully acquire mature insight and understanding, wherewith to consciously counteract the hidden maternal influence, if it is seriously detrimental to healthy social growth.

The intent of the foregoing is to help you get your bearings, psychologically, in current relationships to your mother. You need to know where you stand, emotionally; how you got there; and just how strong is the pull of the undertow. What you want of me, unconsciously, is an "authoritative" pronouncement that your mother's demands are wrong, and that your frightened resistance is clearly justified. You want a "personage," presumably more knowledgeable and influential than she, to denounce her guilt-fueling innuendoes as unrighteous. You want special verbal championship in trying to get morally free of her dominion.

But as I said to start, mere verbal teaching from outside the situation cannot give you real peace of mind in dealing justly with your mother, if it means displeasing her. You've been steeped in emotional subservience to her morbidly dependent temperament, and your nervous system will continue to vibrate guiltily to her doldrums, unless and until you've had an emotional housecleaning as concerns her. And to achieve this, you must have some firsthand intensive analytic guidance. A short series of therapeutic interviews as a free clinic patient might turn the tide, if you cannot afford specialist fees. Now for an emphatic last word — if your mother has the opportunity to live with a widowed friend after you marry, that is the indisputably fair move for her to make. M. H.

OAS Pair Given a Party Salute

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

LUIS QUINTANILLA, retiring chairman of the Council of the Organization of American States, and Hector David Castro, Ambassador to the United States from El Salvador as well as retiring vice chairman of OAS, were given a party salute yesterday.

The new chairman of the Pan American group, Dr. Hildebrando Accioly of Brazil and Mme. Accioly, entertained at cocktails yesterday for the two outgoing officers whose one-year term ended by law with an election on the third Monday in November.

Sharing honors with their husbands were Senora de Quintanilla and Senora de Castro, and among the guests were the new vice chairman, Dr. Rene Lepervanche of Venezuela and Senora de Lapervanche.

LATIN AMERICAN AMBASSADORS and their wives were invited. And among others dropping in during the course of the afternoon were the Brazilian Ambassador Mauricio Nabuco; the Secretary General of the Pan American Union, Dr. Alberto Lleras and Senora de Lleras; Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, jr., and Mrs. Miller; former Ambassador and Mrs. Fletcher Warren; Randolph Kidder, who heads the Brazilian desk at the State Department, and Mrs. Kidder; Prof. and Mrs. Charles Fenwick, and Paul Daniels, our Ambassador to OAS, who returned yesterday from New York.

Members if the Brazilian Military Mission and their wives, the colleagues of the honor guests and hosts from OAS, were still others invited.

Dr. Quintanilla, who continues as Mexican Ambassador to the OAS, will leave soon with his Senora to spend a month in Mexico.

THE SERVICE SET

FOR THEIR MANY FRIENDS, Admiral Sir Cyril and Lady Douglas-Pennant entertained yesterday during the cocktail hours. As Sir Cyril is head of the Naval Staff, British Joint Services Mission, admirals outnumbered generals, and the guests were predominantly British.

Marshal of the Royal Air Force Lord Arthur and Lady Tedder, Gen. Sir Neil Ritchie, and Air Chief Marshal Sir George and Lady Pirie were in the gathering. Also, Sir Alwyn and Lady Crow, Sir Leslie and Lady Rowan, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Stephen N. Shoosmith, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. J. F. Stevens.

Still others included Lady Seton, Leander McCormick-Goodhart, Chief of United States Naval Operations Admiral Forrest P. Sherman and Mrs. Sherman, Rear Admiral and Mrs. John W. Roper, the Commandant of the United States Marine Corps Gen. Clifton B. Cates and Mrs. Cates, Vice Admiral and Mrs. John H. Cassidy, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Francis Low, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Walter White and Charles and Lady Catherine Hume.

The Ambassador of Pakistan and Mme. Ispahani, the Ambassador of the Netherlands and Mme. van Roijen, and the Ambassador of Peru and Senora de Berckemeyer were also guests. From other embassies came Commodore and Mrs. H. N. Lay of Canada, Signor and Signora Luciolli of Italy, Rear Admiral and Mme. Anderberg of Sweden, Rear Admiral and Mme. Ramlau-Hansen of Denmark, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Jacobsen of Norway.

PARTY PARADE

MRS. F. MITCHELL GOULD entertained last evening at a dinner at her home in honor of the Ambassador of Ceylon and Mme. Corea. Other guests were Gen. and Mrs. John Greely, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Littell, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. James Purdy, Mme. Vladimir Rybar, Mrs. Thomas Cowell, Mrs. Leighton Glassford, Senator Clyde R. Hoey, Clarence Hewes, Berend Dryber and George Williams.

IT WAS IOWA DAY yesterday at 1734 N st., headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, as Mrs. Hiram Houghton, president of the GFWC and a resident of Red Oak, Iowa, entertained Iowa delegates to the Midcentury White House Conference meeting here this week. Some 48 delegates—the largest delegation from the State in the history of the conference—as well as members of the Iowa group in Congress, were among those who attended. Gov. William S. Beardsley of Iowa, who was to have been honor guest, was detained en route to Washington and was unable to attend.

Among the guests were Senator and Mrs. Bourke Hickenlooper, Senator and Mrs. Guy M. Gillette, Representative and Mrs. Ben F. Jensen, Mrs. Thomas E. Martin, wife of Representative Martin, and Mrs. James I. Doliver, wife of Representative Doliver. Husbands of the latter pair were still busy on the Hill.

AH, SWEET MUSIC

THE FINNISH MINISTER and Mme. Jutila will have a box for the Boston Symphony concert to be conducted by Serge Koussevitsky Thursday evening at Constitution Hall when Jan Sibelius, noted Finnish composer will be honored on his 85th birthday. The first half of the program will be devoted to Sibelius' compositions.

Mr. and Mrs. Andre Visson will have two boxes and will entertain at a small supper party following the concert in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Koussevitsky who are old friends. The foursome have spent many happy summers in Lenox, Mass., with Dr. Koussevitsky conducting at the Tanglewood concerts and the Vissons in the audience.

The Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann will have in their box the distinguished Swiss cellist Henri Honegger, who will play at a musicale at the embassy on Friday afternoon. Others who have boxes are Mrs. H. A. Spaulding, Mrs. Stephen P. Dorsey, Mrs. Philip Rhinelander who will have with her her son and daughter-in-law from Charlottesville, Va., and the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn and his daughter, Miss Georgiana Glenn.

IN A WORTHY CAUSE

AFTER AN INTERIM of five years, Mrs. Martin Vogel and her home hospitality committee are resuming their work entertaining members of the Armed Forces in and near Washington. The committee is preparing to meet whatever needs are necessary to create the hospitality of a home-away-from-home for United States service men and women, as well as convalescents, and Mrs. Vogel expects the committee to be functioning actively in the very near future.

Mrs. Truman is honorary chairman of the committee, and Mrs. Barkley is vice chairman. Among those serving on the committee will be Mrs. Fred Vinson, Mrs. George Catlett Marshall, Mrs. Omar N. Bradley, Mrs. Harold H. Burton, Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, Lady Berendsen, Senora de la Colina, Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Mrs. Charles Bunker, Mrs. Alf Heiberg and Mrs. James Murray.

Mrs Bennett Here for Winter Season

Mrs. Jess Bryan Bennett is back for the winter after several months in Mexico, Central America and Europe.

After a month in Mexico City, Acapulco and Cuernavaca, Mrs. Bennett visited El Salvador, Costa Rica and Panama. Then she repacked her trunks with clothing more suitable for colder weather and left for France, where she stopped in Paris, Biarritz and Nice. In Berlin she visited the world famous animal sculptress, Rene Sintenis; stayed several days in Amsterdam and after that was off for Rome.

In the Italian capital she visited her son-in-law, Denis Devlin, newly appointed Irish Minister to Italy and Turkey.

SEPARATES—Ruth's answer to the budget problem

Gay Wardrobe Can Be Thrifty

By Ann Lawrence

IN PLANNING a wardrobe, Ruth had three main points to consider: (1) A limited budget; (2) a shorter than average figure, and (3) her husband's love of gay colors.

The first and last problems are not unusual, of course! However, a man's preference for bright, vivid colors can handicap a woman in planning a wardrobe on a small budget. For there's no doubt that a basic, black, brown, and navy or gray wardrobe is more versatile than one which runs to startling reds, brilliant greens, etc., which the titular head of the house may prefer.

There are, however, ways and means to please That Man by your use of gay colors and please him even more by staying within your clothes allowance.

Ruth found that Ronald, her husband, would settle for a brown dress—if that dress were brightened by a flaming orange scarf, a kelly green sash, a gleaming set of gold earrings, pin or necklace.

SHE HAS BOUGHT a basic brown outfit of soft wool. Its sanka color is most becoming to her fair skin and golden hair, is younger looking—on Ruth—than black. The rib-knit neckline of the dress can be varied in multiple ways—with jewelry, bits of bright ribbon, scarfs, even a white collar. The boxy jacket—flattering to a not-so-slender midriff—can also be spiced with color. Ruth was introduced to proportion-size dresses in her quest for clothes to fit her shorter-than-average figure. Alterations had always been a time and a budget problem.

Many stores do not carry a wide color and size range of these proportioned-to-fit dresses, but you can always ask the buyer to look for what you want,

SEPARATES are another answer to the limited budget and short-waisted problem. Ruth tried separate blouses and skirts in junior sizes and found that a size 15 was a perfect fit.

Today's picture shows Ruth in a variation of the separates theme. Besides the attractive skirt and contrasting weskit you see pictured, there is a matching charcoal jacket lined in lemon. By Horowitz & Duberman. Hat by Madcaps—scarves by Glentex—jewelry by Coro.

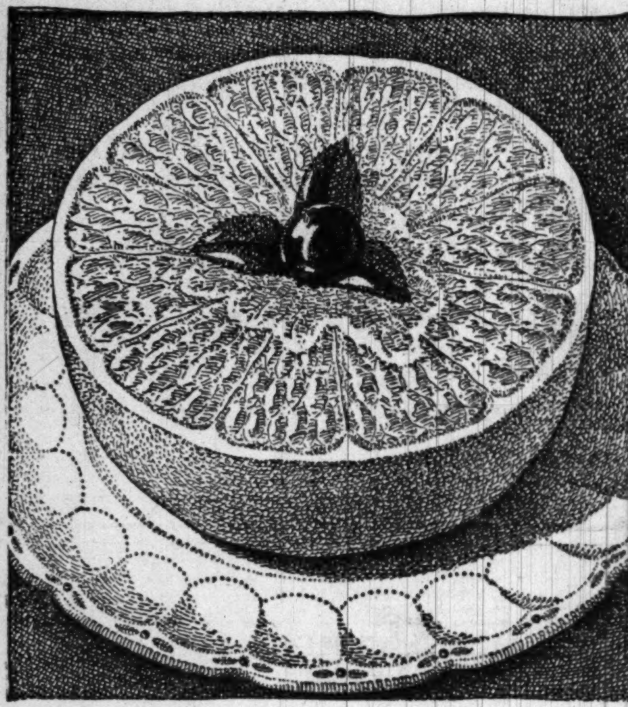
Halve it..."salad" it... or drink it

Florida's "Bracer-Fruit"

Grapefruit



HALVE IT! Then, remove core and cut around each section, loosening fruit from membrane with knife. Serve it just plain, or with maraschino cherry and mint (illustrated), grape halves, or orange-cranberry relish. A "bracing" way to start the day.

Here's the answer to that "half-awake, half-asleep" feeling that plagues millions of folks at the start of the day. It's Florida's "bracer-fruit," grapefruit.

Tangy, bracing Florida grapefruit picks you up when energy's low (any time during the day). It helps keep resistance up, fatigue down. Gives you large amounts of health-building Vitamin C (your body can't store this precious vitamin—it needs a fresh supply daily.)

Natural growing conditions give Florida grapefruit that tangy, true, "bracing" flavor people prefer. So serve the fresh fruit, the canned sections, or the canned or fresh-frozen (concentrated) juice frequently. Florida Citrus Commission. Lakeland, Florida.

Over the Rails and Through The Air to Grandmother's House Folks Will Travel

PLANS FOR CHRISTMAS TRIPS are in the air—journeys home to see the family or away to Grandmother's in the country. Mrs. E. R. writes:

DEAR ANNE:

I leave in one week with three children on a Christmas vacation trip, overnight by coach. It will be necessary to eat one meal on the train and I'm at a loss what to do with the baby while the two older children (both pre-school age) and I eat. Could I ask the stewardess to watch the baby (7 months old)? What services may I expect or ask of the stewardess? Is it correct to tip her? If so, how much? If not, how may we show our appreciation for her services?

Mrs. E. R., Washington.

You do not mention on which railroad you plan to travel, so it is hard to give you exact information. I have talked to offices of several, and practice seems to differ a bit on trains having stewardesses, or hostesses, as they are sometimes called.

One line, for instance, doesn't allow the hostess to keep a tiny infant while the mother goes to the diner. She can take care of children a little older, however. Another line says the hostess will stay with the children—regardless of age—if she has time. There are many demands on her services, so she may not always be able to do so.

All hostesses, though, are expected to do everything time and facilities permit to make the trip easier for mothers with young children. They will keep bottles (prepared at home) in the refrigerator for you and heat them at feeding time. Or they will obtain milk and other ingredients available on the train and help you prepare the formula. One line prohibits their taking tips. Others say they may do so if they wish, but the services offered are free and not dependent in any way on a tip. A thank-you note to the railroad later, commending the hostess, would be a nice gesture.

DEAR ANNE:

How big should a rug for the living room be in relation to the room? I know that a series of small rugs is sometimes used—scatter rugs—but what I want is just the one big rug.

T. I., Washington.

Except where scatter rugs or wall-to-wall carpeting is used, the style today is to have the rug follow the outline of the room, allowing for a margin of from 6 to 12 inches between wall and rug around the entire room.

DEAR ANNE:

I have just moved into a new home where I have a large picture window in the living room (approximately 9 feet in width). In the same room I have two other windows of the usual size. I want to have a wooden valance (either painted or covered with fabric) made for the picture window and use drapes at all the windows. Should I also have valances made for the smaller windows?

W. M., Hyattsville, Md.

Yes, I think so, particularly if the windows are being draped with the same fabric. Sometimes in modern rooms, valances (or cornices) run continuously around the sides of the rooms where windows are located. This makes an attractive finish where windows reach almost to the ceiling.

Christmas Candle Can Be Enhanced

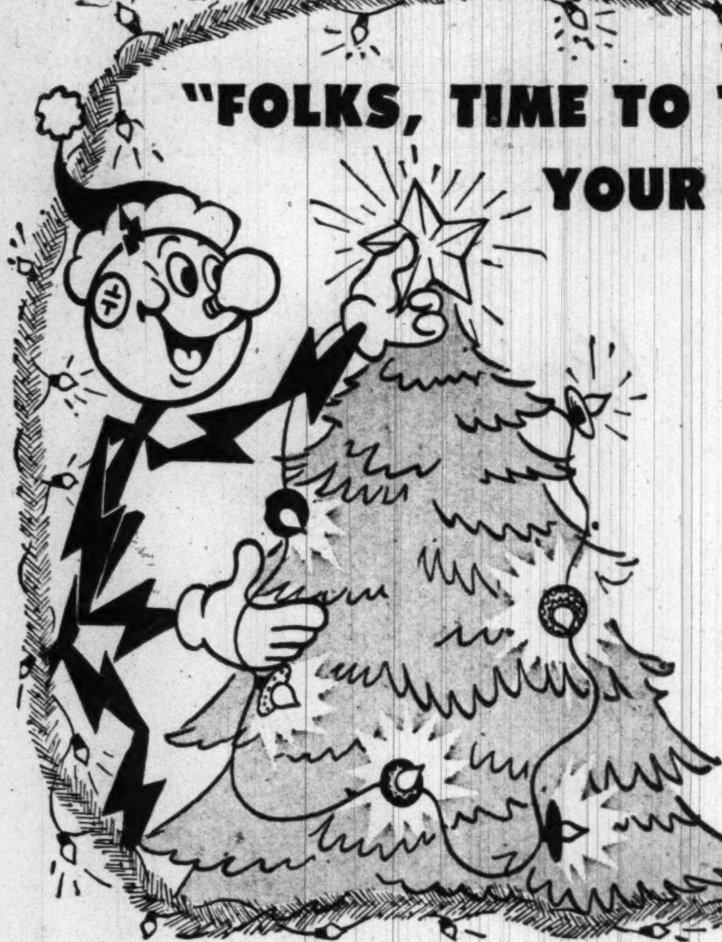
The Christmas candle is one of the loveliest of the Christmas traditions. You can enhance its loveliness by lighting it in a setting of angel's hair, shiny balls, and stars. Elizabeth Matthews describes some easy arrangements, in McCall's for December, for your mantel, your hall, your dining table, or your window:

"On a cake plate: Surround a fat 5-inch candle with silver and chartreuse balls, cluster small balls among them to suggest bunches of grapes.

"In the clouds: Cluster candles of several shades of blue on a mirror plaque. Fluff glass angel's hair around them and dot it with shining blue stars.

"Twined with jewels: Wrap red Christmas tree beads around the base. Finish with large, glamorous crimson balls.

"FOLKS, TIME TO TAKE ACTION ON YOUR CHRISTMAS LIGHTING!"



"INSIDE—festoons of gay-colored bulbs for the family tree, decorative bulbs for your welcoming doorway and windows, soft amber tapered bulbs, strings of round bulbs to glow through heaps of yuletide greens on your mantel—your holiday table.

OUTSIDE—(and mighty effective, too) a shrubbery-hidden Projector Floodlight to light up your yard like a Christmas fairyland!"

Treat your family to Mrs. Wintersteen's Christmas Ribbon Candy

CLIP THIS RECIPE!
★ 4¼ cups sifted Franklin Confectioners xxxx Sugar
★ ¼ cup melted butter or margarine
★ Few grains salt
★ 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
★ 5 tablespoons evaporated milk, about
★ 1 square (1 oz.) unsweetened chocolate, melted
★ ⅓ cup chopped walnut meats
★ 8 chopped maraschino cherries

Combine 4 cups sugar, butter or margarine, salt and vanilla extract; adding enough milk to make mixture right consistency to hold its shape. Knead until smooth. Divide into 3 equal parts; leaving ⅓ plain; adding chocolate and nut meats to ⅓; and to remaining ⅓, add ¼ cup Confectioners Sugar and cherries. Line small ice-cube tray, approximately 11" x 4" x 1¼" with aluminum foil.

Place chocolate portion in bottom of tray; place vanilla in center and cherry on top. Let stand about 1 hour in refrigerator. Remove loaf from tray and slice. Mrs. Edgar J. Wintersteen, of Dayton, Ohio, says the secret of this delicious Christmas candy is simple—just be sure to use the right Franklin Sugar, and so be sure you get

Postoffices Lengthen Hours To Speed Christmas Mail

All Washington Postoffice stations and branches will be open all day for the next two Saturdays to expedite Christmas mailings, Postmaster Roy M. North announced yesterday.

In addition, the Benjamin Franklin station, 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., will be open until 10 p. m. from Saturday through December 22, including Sundays.

The Main Postoffice, North Capitol st. and Massachusetts ave., will be open daily, including Sundays, until December 22, from 7 a. m. until midnight. All postoffices will be closed Christmas Day, and only a limited force will be maintained to dispatch important mail.

The postmaster reminded residents that today is the deadline for assured Christmas delivery of cards and parcels for the Far West and Southwest States; Friday, middle western and southern States; Saturday, New England States, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey; Monday, West Virginia, North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware, and December 15 for Washington, D. C.

Judge Questions Purpose of U. S. In Banking Suit

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (AP).—Federal Judge Harold R. Medina inquired today whether the Government instituted its antitrust action against 17 banking firms because it wished to "play along with two or three houses in Chicago and elsewhere."

He particularly asked whether the Government wanted to benefit Halsey, Stuart & Co. and Otis & Co.

Homes Baldridge, special assistant to the Attorney General, denied there was any intent to favor a few houses and said the Government wanted thousands of investment bankers to benefit.

Medina, presiding judge in the antitrust action, raised the question after Baldridge contended the defendants aided their alleged monopoly by favoring New York investment brokers as members of syndicates which sold securities.

One On the Aisle

Nathan's Annual Informs Us Hicks

By Richard L. Coe

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE: It should surprise no one that George Jean Nathan has another book ready for the Christmas trade, the ninth in his "Theater Book of the Year" series.

It is, as always, immensely readable, provocative and proof, among other things, that the Cornell graduate of 1904 has the niftiest filing system of anyone in the business.

Each year I promise myself to go through his latest volume in a detecto spirit and check back through the 29 other volumes he's written on the same subject to trip the master with his own words. Again, as usual, this mountainous task is beyond me and, anyway, he's always made it perfectly clear that only the opinions of a numbskull are unchanging.

However, this year he comes to us with the blessing of the greatest critic of them all, G. Bernard Shaw, who wrote for this volume: "Attaboy! Write another thousand. I like your stuff and rank you as Intelligent Reader and Playgoer No. 1."

This brings to mind Nathan's own proudest boast that he is a "destructive critic." Once, finding that a book of his failed to meet his own critical standards, he printed, under a pseudonym, a criticism of the book, "which, perfectly just criticism, upon subsequent reading impressed me as exceedingly harsh and unfriendly, if not, indeed, postively vicious." He destroys what is inartistic because it is inartistic, with no thought of making room for "improvement."

Since Bernard Shaw has been so professed an admirer of Nathan, it's interesting to read in Hesketh Pearson's new book after Shaw's death ("G. B. S., a Postscript"—Harper $2.75) that Shaw had high opinion of good manners.

Shaw told Pearson: "The more candidly you criticize the more delicately you must draw the line between what may be said and what may not. In short, your manners must be as good as your brains if you are to make good your claim to criticize. You must give your man the republican respect that is due to him before you pull his work to pieces. Nothing is worse than a sneer, even though it may not incur damages."

Praises "Consul" Star

The latest Nathan lists his customary "Especially Interesting Performances," of which not one has been seen in this city.

However, Patricia Neway's appearance here next week in "The Consul" will rectify that and future weeks of Lynn Fontanne in "I Know My Love," Shirley Booth and Sidney Blackmer in "Come Back, Little Sheba" will help though when "As You Like It" arrives, Ernest Thesiger's Seven Ages of Man speech will no longer be a feature.

Another interesting feature of Nathan's laurel-tossings is that three of his preferences can't play here because of the District Child Labor Law, "The Member of the Wedding," "Peter Pan" and "The Happy Time." Nor is it likely that the "Gayety ever will be showing us Carol Channing's remarkable Lorelie Lee of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

In brief, Nathan's reports on what's left of the theater elsewhere are must reading for theater lovers in a scraggly outpost. That his chapters are written in a breezy, even popular style, is but one more remarkable feature about this young man of 68.

EDWARD O. KELLY, of the Washington Circle Players, is mighty pleased that the inventiveness of his group has found a better answer for "The Thirteenth Chair" stage directions than those suggested from the original by the Samuel French company . . . This concerns how to get a ceiling-stuck dagger to drop to the floor at the melodrama's most crucial moment . . . George W. Coan of the group, rigged up a device they plan to offer to other little theater groups through the publishers . . . Carnegie Tech man Kelly views it as a case of the off-Broadway groups being more ingenious than Gotham, "at times," he adds.

RAIMU, whom the French studios must be missing, stars in the next few of the Little Theater Film Festival revivals . . . "The Baker's Wife" open today, with "The Well-Digger's Daughter," "Marius," "Fanny" and "Cesar" on future four-day programs.

GERRY WAGNER, buddha of the Playhouse-Dupont-Little axis, back in town after recuperating from an operation and getting settled for a new life at the General Scott . . . Do they allow dogs, Gerry?

GLORIA SWANSON will team with Jose Ferrer in "Twentieth Century," that Hecht-McArthur comedy Joe played with such success at Olney two summers ago . . . This will be Gloria's first stage role since her phenomenal success in "Sunset Boulevard" and her second in Gotham, the first the ill-fated "Sauce for the Goose." . . . She's fortunate in that wise Ferrer will direct, though playing opposite that smart cookie won't be a snap . . . It opens a two-week run Christmas Eve and if it goes, a straight commercial run may follow.

THE MUSICIANS union of New York is up to its old trick of Calling a play that uses incidental music a "musical," which means the six musicians of "The Release" will now split an additional $241 weekly. . . . It's the custom for plays having 25 minutes of music to be thus classified, so General Manager Peter Davis of the Guild, having counted 20 minutes for "The Relapse," will appeal.

THE BLACKBURN TWINS, headlining at the Capitol with Martha Stewart, really are twins, aged 25, Long Island-born, though one is huskier than the other . . . Their names are Royce and Raymond and they're alumni of the Air Force's wartime "Winged Victory," which may not add up to 25 as an age, but who am I to argue with the brightest vaudeville act I've seen in moons?

IVA KITCHELL, doing her comedy tonight at the Cafritz Auditorium, 16th and Q, is on occasion the housewife many of her admirers are. . . . Just before starting this cross-country tour, Iva was painting her kitchen when the phone rang. . . . Tenor James Melton, due for an upstate concert, was ill, would she take over? . . . Iva did and there were no refunds asked.

Margaret Truman Sings Here Again With Light Program

By Paul Hume

Margaret Truman, soprano, sang in Constitution Hall last night.

It was not her first recital there, and it was probably not her last. Miss Truman is a unique American phenomenon with a pleasant voice of little size and fair quality.

She is extremely attractive on the stage. Her program is usually light in nature, designed to attract those who like the singing of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. Yet Miss Truman cannot sing very well.

She is flat a good deal of the time—more last night than at any time we have heard her in past years. There are few moments during her recital when one can relax and feel confident that she will make her goal, which is the end of the song.

Miss Truman has not improved in the years we have heard her. She has learned about her diaphragm and its importance to her singing. She has learned that she must work in order to make something of her voice. But she still cannot sing with anything approaching professional finish.

She communicates almost nothing of the music she presents. Schumann, Schubert, and Mozart were on her program last night. Yet the performance of music by these composers was no more than a caricature of what it would be if sung by any one of a dozen artists today.

And still the public goes and pays the same price it would for the world's finest singers.

It was wise and very sensible of this young American to open her program with three songs by Francis Hopkinson. For Hopkinson not only is numbered among the signers of the Declaration of Independence, but he is also counted as our first native composer.

A Waltz Song by Edward German was not worth resurrecting, nor were Besley and Spross songs in the final group.

It is an extremely unpleasant duty to record such unhappy facts about so honestly appealing a person. But as long as Miss Truman sings as she has for three years, and does today, we seem to have no recourse unless it is to omit comment on her programs altogether.

Herman Allison gave fine accompaniments, but played two solos and an encore quite badly. Miss Truman's first encores were by Popper and Delibes, from whom she sang songs arranged from instrumental works. Her final encores were Grieg's My Johann, and Sweethearts, by Romberg.

President, Mrs. Truman, Attlee Hear Margaret

By the United Press

President and Mrs. Truman and British Prime Minister Clement Attlee were among an enthusiastic audience which packed Constitution Hall last night to hear Margaret Truman's concert.

Attlee sat in the Presidential box as a guest of the President. With them also were the British Ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks, and Lady Franks.

Daily Bath Real Menace to Health, -Doctor Says So!

CHICAGO, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Dr. Clyde Cummer, Cleveland skin specialist, said today that people take too many baths.

He said Americans are bathtub conscious. They like to soak in the hot water and get all soapy.

Cummer said elderly persons, especially, have thin skins, and that soap and wate isn't too good for them.

"One bath a day is too much for some people," he said.

Cummer and nearly 1000 other skin doctors are attending the ninth annual meeting of the American Academy of Dermatology and Syphilology.

Cummer, a past president of the academy, said virtually everybody has a skin ailment of some kind—athlete's foot, pimples, moles and the like.

He had a sympathetic thought for housewives.

Sensational Red Findings Expected Here

House probers expect sensational new disclosures about Communism in Washington to flow from hearings starting today.

First witness will be Henry Thomas, embattled president of Local 74 of the AFL building laborers' union, one of Washington's largest.

The hearing, called by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, will be held in room 26 Old House Office Building at 10 a. m.

Thomas was reported ready to cooperate with the committee. The report came from committee aides after they questioned him at length yesterday.

Two other persons also were questioned yesterday, and are expected to testify later. In all, 16 subpenas have been issued.

Among others reported to have been subpenaed was a District Health Department doctor. His name was not disclosed.

Thomas, who has said he used to be a member of the Communist Party but left it, has been feuding for control of Local 74 with a former friend, Tom Sampler, secretary-treasurer, who similarly has said he was in the Communist Party but left it.

Sampler, too, has been subpenaed for testimony.

Refugees in Argentina

Ample Power Through 1953 Seen by Wilson

By S. Oliver Goodman

Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric Co., yesterday predicted ample electric power to meet the Nation's increasing needs through 1953.

Wilson

In a luncheon address at the National Press Club, Wilson said that on the basis of a G.E. survey "the Nation will have a margin of reserve generating capacity 20 percent above the estimated load peak in 1953." He added that the G.E. survey, arrived at independently, was within 1 percent of the figures recently published by the Edison Electric Institute.

In his judgment, Wilson said, there could be a power shortage only if one or more of the following things happens:

1. If major war production projects, such as aluminum plants or special new bomb projects are heedlessly located in sections of the country where power can't be made available to them.

2. If the present manufacturing facilities for utility power supply equipment are diverted to other purposes, thus delaying schedules of equipment already on order.

3. If the materials necessary to producing this equipment are not made available as a vital part of the over-all defense program.

Wilson was in Washington in connection with the opening today of a three-day exhibit of an equipment-packed special train at the B. & O. Eckington Yards, Florida and New York aves. ne. The "More Power to America Special" contains more than 2000 electrical products and ideas. It will be on exhibit through Friday.

STILL MORE: Second National Bank yesterday reported $305,631 in Christmas savings being distributed to 4350 accounts. This brought the Yule savings total for nine Washington banks to $2,429,105 for more than 36,000 depositors.

RETIREMENT: General Motors Corp. announced the resignation of M. E. Coyle, an executive vice president and member of the board of directors, effective December 31. President C. E. Wilson said Coyle "has elected to retire several months in advance of the normal retirement time. He has served General Motors with distinction in many important capacities during the last 39 years, including 13 years as general manager of Chevrolet." The directors elected Louis C. Goad, a General Motors board member since 1946, to succeed Coyle as executive vice-president in charge of the car and truck group, body and assembly divisions group, and the accessory group.

ODD LOTS: The Federal Home Loan Bank Board yesterday offered 89 million dollars worth of 1.80 percent consolidated notes. The notes, dated December 15, 1950, and due June 15, 1951, are priced at par. . . Operators of 250 supermarkets throughout the nation reported 1950 construction projects totaled 230 million dollars, highest since 1947 . . . More than 2100 miners' houses in the Uniontown, Pa., area have been sold by the H. C. Frick Coke Co. to John W. Galbreath, Ohio real estate operator . . . J. C. Penney Co., department store chain, has authorized a special yearend payment equal to two weeks' pay for all full-time associates employed during all of 1950 . . . Richard B. Hall, Washington, was elected vice president of the Public Relations Society of America.

Buying Brisk As List Stages Sizable Rally

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (AP). — In a complete about face, the stock market surged ahead today following Monday's tumble.

Closng prices showed gains running to around $2 a share—and quotations were headed upward at the final bell.

Not all of Monday's losses were recouped, but they were sharply reduced. On average the market regained about two-thirds of the ground lost yesterday when heavy selling swept through the exchange as a result of shocking international news and prospects for steeply higher taxes and extended Government controls.

The international scene today was just about as murky as it was yesterday. Taxes and stiff controls were, if anything, a shade nearer. But stock traders had a thorough change of heart, with a large part of the change based on hope.

WHAT STOCKS DID

	Tues.	Mon.
Advances	752	60
Declines	208	1039
Unchanged	208	109
Total issues	1168	1208

Prices advanced in two stages. Plenty of buying orders were on hand when the market opened and leading shares readily responded. Demand subsided for a couple of hours and then picked up speed in early afternoon. Prices kept pushing ahead right up to the finish.

Turnover amounted to 1,940,000 shares, well below Monday's 2,510,100 but still a good day's business.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained $1.40 at $82.90 a share. This compared with a drop yesterday of $2.20 a share. Rail and industrial stocks accounted for the bulk of the advance while utilities merely inched upward.

Some brokers thought that the Monday crack-up had more than discounted even the current run of unpalatable news. Bargain hunters were attracted by lower prices and some traders who had sold short took the opportunity of covering by corresponding purchases.

In addition, the market had the benefit of another load of inflationary news—mainly a price increase for 1951 cars announced by General Motors and a boost in the price of pig iron.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (AP).—The cotton futures market turned strong today and recovered more than one-half of the sharp losses recorded on Monday. Final quotations were up $5.60 a bale to $1.90 lower.

The market also got a boost from a statement made by the new Price Administrator at Washington that plans are underway to start as soon as possible voluntary price controls. The administrator added that mandatory price controls are not possible at this time. In recent sessions heavy selling of cotton futures was based on fears of immediate imposition of strict price controls.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Dec. 5 (AP).—Prospect of export business and indications no immediate compulsory controls gave grains a firm to strong tone at the close of today's board of trade session.

The director of price stabilization, Michael V. Di Salle was quoted as saying voluntary controls would be tried first and if these did not work, a compulsory program would be made effective.

At the finish wheat was ⅝ to 1¼ higher, corn was 2 to 3 cents higher, oats were 1¼ to 2 cents higher, rye was 2 to 3½ higher, soybeans were 2¾ to 3¾ higher and lard was 20 to 30 cents a hundredweight higher.

The Production and Marketing Administration was said to have made no flour awards to government agencies, but was understood to have asked mills to resubmit offers for sales on Thursday.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

OLMSTED'S has been outdoing itself lately with parties and festivals, and today's version will especially be welcomed by those in the holiday mood.

It's a goose festival—featuring the noble Watertown geese, flown in from northern New York to phold the tradition of Christmas dinners as they were known in Dickens' "Christmas Carol."

In a Christmas atmosphere, the comfortable, tasteful restaurant on G st. will set a big buffet table behind the plants at the front of the room.

The goose, though, won't seem much like a fowl at first—because Chef Rene Roux has his own ways of making a bird tender and juicy. This time he does it by putting each goose in a casserole, along with the roast apples, apple dressing, potatoes and red Bavarian cabbage. Then he covers the outside with dough. Hermetically sealed in this way, the goose has an unusual tenderness.

Excellent with it would be a bottle of Pommard or Macon wine (or if you prefer beer, Wurzburger is on tap now).

Dessert will be on the buffet table, for each guest to choose as he likes. It's a good idea to make reservations during the day, if you've a hankering for goose. It will also be served on the regular menus from now on, as long as the Watertown flock remains willing.

JACK "Jive" Schafer is now at the Lounge Riviera in the Hotel 2400. The colorful band leader, who was at the Casino Royal for many years, has been taking his turn at some of the other night spots this fall. Now it's the Lounge Riviera.

The special floor show is at 11:30, and it's guaranteed to pep up an evening. Jack's musicians will be in the floor show, as the Lecuona Cuban boys are at the Wardman Park. Featured will be Pianist Jack Holiday, who accompanied Pearl Bailey; June Elliott's songs and of course Jack "Jive."

The Schafer combination also can be a completely "sweet" dance orchestra, so maybe they're right when they say of themselves, "from the Charleston to the Congo nightly from 8:30 to 1 a. m."

Monroney at St. Thomas

Rep. A. S. (Mike) Monroney (D., Okla.) will speak on Korea to an assembly meeting of St. Thomas Episcopal Church, 1772 Church st. nw., at 8 o'clock tonight. Monroney is a newly elected Senator.

Bottle Club Man Pleads Guilty; Owed D. C. $300

Edward (Patsy) Messerole, major domo of the Stagecrafters bottle club at 433 3d st. nw., pleaded guilty yesterday to eight counts of violating the District of Columbia Unemployment Compensation Act.

Messerole broke off his day-long jury trial on the charges to change his plea to guilty.

Judge Ellen K. Raedy ordered Messerole to reimburse the District Government immediately. Prosecutor William R. Glendon said approximately $300 is involved.

The money represents unpaid unemployment compensation due on club employes' salaries during the last three years, Glendon said.

Iron Prices Raised By 4 Steel Firms

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 5 (AP).—Four subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation today raised prices of three grades of pig iron $3 a ton.

Basic pig iron went to $52 a ton, Bessemer iron to $53 and malleable iron to $52.50.

The four companies involved are Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, American Steel and Wire Company, National Tube Company and Geneva Steel Company. No reason was given for the increase.

West Faints at Meeting

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West fainted yesterday at a meeting of the District Commissioners and was taken home in an ambulance. An examining physician told Mrs. West it was probably caused by a combination of West's low blood pressure and the heat from Commissioner John Russell Young's fireplace.

Now specially formulated for Best possible cold-weather performance
Enjoy faster starts, smoother pick-up, more ping-free power, and longer mileage—with "Calso," the NEW BIG NAME in gasoline!
You wouldn't think of operating your car during the winter months without the protection of oils and lubricants specially designed for cold-weather motoring.
Now, with "Calso," you can also give your engine the benefit of a gasoline scientifically developed for maximum efficiency under worst winter conditions!
Winter-grade "Calso" has the higher volatility and increased vapor pressure you need in cold weather. It quickly snaps the most sluggish engine into action . . . shortens the warm-up period . . . results in less oil dilution and engine wear. And you get every bit of the smooth pick-up and long mileage you enjoyed with "Calso" all summer!
The "Calso" stations in your neighborhood are now pumping winter-grade. Drive in at the big red "Calso" sign today and tank up. Winter-grade "Calso" costs you no more . . . but what a difference it makes in the way your car performs!
Stop at the big red sign...

New Lawsuit Stalls School Bond Issue

A new law suit challenging validity of $11,480,000 worth of Fairfax County bonds yesterday forced county officials to call off a scheduled opening of bids on the bond issue.

Sale of the bonds was postponed indefinitely. Then, both the county school board and the board of supervisors called on Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh Marsh to investigate the possibility of taking legal action against the instigator of the suit that made the delay necessary.

The school board and the supervisors, in separate resolutions, agreed to reject, unopened, all bids on a $10,500,000 bond issue for "critical" school construction and a $980,000 expenditure for a proposed new courthouse wing.

They did so on the advice of Marsh, who said a suit filed Monday by Paul E. Rhinehart, jr., created a state of "pending litigation" which would make delivery of the bonds to the successful bidder impossible until the suit is concluded.

Rhinehart's suit asks a court judgment to declare the bonds invalid. Rhinehart was party to an earlier action, withdrawn several weeks ago after it delayed sale of the bonds for more than four months.

In his new complaint, he charges that a successful annexation suit by the City of Alexandria has removed from the county some of the voters who approved the bond issues in public referendum last May 31. As a result, he asserts, the remainder of voters in the county now are burdened with a heavier share of the debt than they had agreed on originally.

Young Parolee Is Charged With Arson

An 18-year-old parolee from the Loch Raven (Md.) Reformatory, was charged yesterday by Prince Georges County police with setting fire to four buildings in the past two weeks.

The youth, Custis Lee Carr, of 5707 White House rd., Ritchie, was arrested early yesterday.

Police said he confessed to firing a vacant schoolhouse on Ritchie rd. on November 23; two houses on Ritchie rd. and in Forestville on November 24, and another house in Ritchie on December 3. The school building was destroyed, the houses were damaged, police said.

A hearing will be held December 8 in Marlboro Courthouse.

Students Told They Will Live In Tension

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (NYTH). Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of Columbia University, told 600 Columbia College freshmen today it is "nothing but a dream" to think they will live in anything but a period of international tension.

The general, who spoke at an orientation meeting, urged the students to realize the nature of the "stark and bleak situation that faces the world today" and work during their lifetimes for individual, national and world freedom.

"If I read the papers correctly," he said, "you and I have something distinctly in common. It seems that all of us may be subject to the draft. It is certainly disconcerting to pick up a paper and realize you may have to fit an overgrown stomach into the uniform you discarded a few years ago."

Eisenhower's remarks were seen as a reference to widespread reports that he will be named supreme commander of the Western defense armies in Europe.

Fairfax Heads Seek Planning Bill Change

The Fairfax County supervisors yesterday asked that a pending congressional bill to create a new National Capital Planning Commission be amended to provide greater representation for Virginia and Maryland.

Berwyn P-TA

Prince Georges County Superintendent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart and Dr. Sumner O. Burhoe, president of the Berwyn Elementary School P-TA, will discuss "Vital Problems Facing Our Schools" at the meeting of the County Council of P-TA Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Surrattsville School.

Extradition Refused in Check Case

A 51-year-old District woman yesterday was freed after an Arlington County Court extradition hearing—then was promptly rearrested in connection with the same Washington bad check charge.

Miss Mabel McClish, 51, of 3631 Jenifer st. nw., was released after denying she was the woman sought in Washington on the worthless check count—a Mrs. Naomi Hill, address unknown.

Detective Sergt. John R. Luskey of the Metropolitan Police check squad testified the woman he and Arlington Detective John Wise arrested Friday in Rosslyn answered their description of Mrs. Hill.

Luskey told the court Mrs. Hill was wanted for signing 8 or 10 worthless checks totaling $1375.

But the woman arrested in Rosslyn identified herself yesterday as Miss McClish. A friend, Mrs. Florence Pearson of 1617 N. Rhodes st., Arlington, took the stand in her support.

After Judge Hugh Reid freed Miss McClish, she was promptly served with a new fugitive warrant—in her name—based on a District charge of being an accessory in the bad check case. The new extradition hearing will be at 9:30 a. m. today.

Hyattsville Play

"George Washington Slept Here" will be presented by the Hyattsville High School Dramatics Club Thursday and Friday at 8 p. m. in the high school auditorium.

. . . In New York

The Midnight Special

Royalty About Town: Crown Prince Olav and Princess Martha of Norway relishing the Broadway hits from front row pews . . . Prince Sandri Khan at the Ballet stagedoor with posies . . . Countess Dorothy di Frasso tossing caviar to her leashed cat in a Madison Ave. shoppe. . . Sir Cedric Hardwicke bowing low to Pamela Churchill on 55th . . . Countess Feltrinelli, who wears a monocle, being kidded by Pat Harrington at The Alibi Club . . . Former General Commissioner of Danzig M. Hodacki now night-clerking in a midtown hotel . . . Defense Chief George Marshall shaking his head gravely when one of three Marines asks: "How's it going, General?" . . . Princess Barbara Hutton Troubetskoy taking a mid-day stroll in the park as her car cruises nearby . . . Gen. Wu Hsiu-chuan, the Red Chinese delegate to the U. N., munching an almond chocolate bar in the Waldorf foyer.

Sallies in Our Alley: Wilson Mizner, the Lindy's story-swappers were saying, once put the bite on banker Otto Kahn for $5000 . . . After giving him the check Otto said: "If you hadn't yelled at me so much, I might have given you double" . . . Mizner indifferently replied: "My dear friend, you take care of your business, which is banking. Let me take care of mine, which is borrowing" . . . During the power shutoff the other storm a housewife phoned the utility people and screamed for relief . . . "Haven't you any heat?" she was asked . . . "No heat, no light," she shrieked, "and no Arthur Godfrey!"

Tropical Park Vignette: When the 5th Race odds went up at Tropical Monday afternoon, "Miss Baron" was 100 to 1 . . . Pat Provisano, the Albany politico, once owned her . . . He wagered $10 across-the-board . . . It romped in first, paying 104 to 1 . . . Pat won $1400 . . . And lost on the day!

Memos of a Midnighter: Helen Forrest, the thrush, and her groom have their own blues lyrics . . . Nancy Kelly and Paula Laurence of "Season in the Sun" supply the backstage cooling system . . . Flo Walters, the ice-skating star, becomes Mrs. A. Johnson Dec. 28th in Fla. . . . Danny Thomas assures the rumor-set they are misinformed . . . "Call Me Madam" remains the No. 1 ticket at the brokerages . . . B. S. Pulley of "Guys and Dolls" chased all the Havana-Madrid chorus girls off stage into their undressingrooms. This is what comes from having a steady job . . . It's a boy for the George Ansbros (ABC) at Lenox Hill Hosp. . . . Isabel Bigley of "Dolls" is the heart of F. Ehrhart, the Mocambo (H'wood) maitre d' . . . Harriet Ames, who backs hits, pulled out of "Darkness at Noon" after a tiff with the author . . . War Correspondent Marguerite Higgins proved a low-cut frock isn't necessary on teevy . . . Frank Fay, displeased with all San Francisco critics over their "If You Please" blackballs, interrupted the show to deliver two 15-minute orations in reprisal.

New York Story: Santa's Helpers, Inc., is going out of business . . . It was the brain-tot of actor Bob Strauss, recently in "Detective Story" . . . For the past few years 75 portly members of Actors' Equity disguised themselves in Santa apparel and on Christmas Day brought gifts to needy children, whose case histories were carefully checked . . . They also brought the Good Cheer that professional actors know how to "play" . . . The sponsors of this happy group included Ralph Bellamy, Joe E. Brown, Louis Calhern, John Carradine, Henry Fonda, Beatrice Lillie, Victor Moore, etc. . . . But it is being dissolved for lack of funds . . . "Because," one of them sighed, "nobody seems to believe in Santa any more."

The Broadway-Hollywood Wire: Republic Studios will be the first to ignore the television ban. It is setting up a subsidiary to peddle specially-made tv films . . . Dan Dailey has his notice to report for training. He was an officer in the Armored Div. . . . Audie Murphy's new love is Patty Archer, an airline hostess . . . Danny Kaye's three dance numbers in "On the Riviera" will cost 20th Century-Fox $200,000 . . . Connie Bennett, now with her groom, Col. J. Coulter in Germany, returns to 20th for "Will You Love Me in December?" . . . Gary Cooper wings here for a Yule reunion with his wife—stifling the recent estrangement report . . . Bobo Rockefeller's intimates report all the news about the settlement has been wrong. The fact: He offered her $50,000 per annum (tax free) for life.

The Big Time: Mary Martin's new album of songs from "Anything Goes" and "The Bandwagon," the first that really sound like Broadway musical shows. The art of Goddard Lieberson . . . Mario Lanza's Carusoing via the "Be My Love" recording . . . Columbia's soon-due thrillm, "The Flying Missile," starring Glenn Ford . . . The "Guys and Dolls" tunes, "Sue Me" and "Adelaide's Lament."

Back-Stage Novelette: David McKay has had leading parts on Broadway . . . He appeared as the son in "The Late George Apley" and in "Chicken Every Sunday" . . . He couldn't find a job for so long—he was overjoyed to latch on as understudy to Rex Harrison in the new hit, "Bell, Book and Candle"—and to Scott McKay (no kin), who wasn't even around when David had leading parts . . . The other matinee he arrived at the Ethel Barrymore Theater to discover he had been moved from his dressing-room to a less desirable one . . . He wasn't moved out because of Harrison or the other McKay—but to make room for Pyewacket, the Siamese cat in the play, which has a bigger role than he has!

Manhattan Murals: Peggy Joyce, Ziegfeld's most famous beauty, and her Favorite Male celebrating their 3rd ann'y of bliss. "Men aren't such bores," she says, "when you're not married to them" . . . Irving Berlin, Man-About-Tune, back from Yurrop and bound for Hawaii, where his pal Joseph M. Schenck, the movie magnate, is reported ill . . . The Mayor and his attractive wife Betty showing locals how the Mambo should be done at Gogi's Larue, the new Smartini spot . . . Lovely Genevieve Tobin (Mrs. Wm. Keighley) at the Polonaise, where patrons recall her from the silent screen days . . . The darling lady at the Pierre, who just sent her check for $20,000 to the Runyon Fund with the memo: "Anonymous, please."

The Late Watch: The Jed Harris-Jean Dalrymple romance never stopped . . . Keats Speed, the m.e. of the late N. Y. Sun, is writing his memoirs in the lonely city room. In longhand . . . Dolly Martin of the Bob Monroe programs weds Wm. L. Reine at Christmas . . . Leo Collins, who covered the cafes 17½ years for the N. Y. Times, just purchased a Daytona Beach resort . . . Babette Holmes of the yeast millions has chums speculating over her steady dates with Bill Gillette, the ad exec. . . . Walter Dropo, the Red Sox rookie sensation, prefers the curves of Shirley Hayward, the dancer . . . Miami's 86 Club (on Biscayne Blvd), a top gambling salon last season, is now Harold Clark's "8600," a popular-priced rendezvous . . . Roy Evans, the motor car tycoon, christened his yacht "For Evans' Sake" . . . Best free show in town for the kids: The chicken incubators (with chicks cracking thru the shells) at Gimbels. The idea of E. D'Amato, an actor. It is outdrawing Santa Claus.

Correction

The Takoma Park City Council has approved a $100 salary increase for the city's 13 police officers through the rank of sergeant, covering the first six months of 1950.

In its Tuesday editions, The Washington Post erroneously stated that an increase of $100 a month, rather than $100 for the six-month period, had been granted. The Post regrets the error.

Effects of Stress On Stomach Shown

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

CLEVELAND, Dec. 5—Visual proof that the stomach is affected by mental disturbances was presented to doctors in annual clinical assembly here today.

The proof was in color slides of a patient who for seven years daily permitted a New York doctor to peer into his "innards" through a "window" in his stomach.

Dr. Stewart Wolf, associate professor of medicine at Cornell University Medical College, reported his findings at a scientific session of the fourth annual clinical assembly of the American Medical Association.

The long-term study showed, he reported, that the healthy stomach, under mental stress, changes in appearance to the characteristic picture of the stomach of a patient with peptic ulcer. Though it doesn't prove mental stress produces such ulcers, it does show that sustained mental upsets can lead to the disorder, Dr. Wolf said.

Physicians have long linked mind and body associations in peptic ulcers, but largely through secondary evidence from animal experimentation, X-ray pictures and specimens of stomach secretions. Dr. Wolf's work, it was said, is the first "direct" and "most advanced" study of mind-body relations in peptic ulcers.

His principal patient, of five, is a 63-year-old hospital handyman who "burned out" his throat when, as a boy of 9, he gulped down some scalding hot clam chowder. Doctors then (in 1895) cut a hole, half-dollar size, into his stomach. For three years the boy's mother fed him gruel through a funnel, and he fared poorly.

Then the youngster, fascinated by the smell of a Christmas turkey, "chewed some up and spat it into the funnel," explained Dr. Wolf. The act so satisfied the boy that from then on he could "eat" anything, by sampling its taste and then "funnelling" the rest directly into the stomach.

Became Normally Active

He became strong, and normally active, hiding his "difference" from even his closest friends, Dr. Wolf said. But the depression caused him to do work which aggravated the surgical "mouth," and he sought medical help.

Since then, for 10 years (with three years out while Dr. Wolf was in military service) the patient, identified only as "Tom," has been a human guinea pig for the study.

At another clinical session yesterday Dr. Brian Blades, professor of surgery at George Washington University, Washington, D. C., warned doctors to be more alert to the possibility of cancer in lung disorders. Where the disorders cannot be positively diagnosed as from other causes, lung cancer should be the chief suspect, he said.

In such suspicions, he added, exploratory surgery should be performed to determine definitely the condition.

Dr. Blades also outlined his recently reported success in relieving post-operative pains by channelling novocaine, pain-killing drug, directly to the pain sites through plastic tubes planted in the patient at the operation's end.

Advertising Fight Praised

Dr. Elmer L. Henderson, of Louisvile, AMA president, lauded the "treme[illegible]us impact" of the October advertising campaign of organized medicine's fight against national compulsory health insurance.

His talk, in opening the sessions of the AMA house of delegates, governing body of the organization, stressed the cooperation given the doctors by "65,000 individuals, firms and associations."

"Those 65,000 new-won friends of our profession," Dr. Henderson said, "spent more than $2,000,000 in a two-week period, or nearly twice as much as the AMA itself, in support of medical freedom."

Cold Hits Central U. S.; Ohio Flood Threat Eases

By The Associated Press

A cold wave, preceded by snow and strong winds, knifed into the Plains States and South yesterday and began fanning out toward the East. The Weather Bureau issued cold-wave and snow warnings for an area from Iowa to western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Skidding temperatures in the upper Ohio valley checked the threat of serious floods along the swollen Ohio River, at least momentarily. Flood danger also diminished in California and all but 700 of the 5000 who fled from their homes Sunday were able to return.

RCA Shows a New And Improved Tube

By Sonia Stein

RADIO CORPORATION of America, which has been levelling the full force of its legal department on the color television problem, yesterday showed that the full force of its engineering research department was also being levelled at the same problem. In a "progress demonstration" of its tri-color tube which was originally shown last April, RCA showed a markedly improved tube capable of greater color fidelity, sharpness of detail and brightness than the earlier one. This lent substance to RCA claims that the potentialities of the tube (and the RCA color television system which uses the tube) had not yet been fully shown, part of RCA's complaint against the Federal Communication Commission's decision authorizing the Columbia Broadcasting System's method of color television and ruling out RCA.

Although Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, chairman of the board of RCA, expressed hope that the improvements in the tube would convince FCC that the RCA system should be used instead of the CBS system, or at least along with it, he stated emphatically that the demonstration was not to be used in connection with a case currently pending in a Chicago court in which RCA had asked for an injunction against the FCC's decision authorizing the CBS system.

The members of the commission were not invited to yesterday's press demonstration at the WRC studios because RCA did not think it proper to invite litigants in the case, Sarnoff said. When the court case is over, RCA will invite the commission to see the tude, he added.

CBS, which is being temporarily restrained by the Chicago court from beginning commercial broadcasting in color while the court is considering the matter of injunction, was not invited to send representatives to yesterday's showing but will be given a demonstration on December 15.

WITNESSES to yesterday's demonstration, which originated at WNBW's Wardman Park studios and was received at WRC, seemed to agree that the sharpness—effected by use of 600,000 dots of colored phosphor on the face of the tube as compared to 351,000 used in April—was improved and that the color showed a marked improvement over earlier demonstrations. Not yet as "warm" and lifelike as colors produced by the mechanical color wheel which CBS currently uses with its system, the colors were quite acceptable.

Neither Dr. C. B. Jolliffe, RCA executive vice president in charge of laboratories, nor Sarnoff spoke of the tube as a finished item, or encouraged the reporters at the demonstration to think that color television is ready. Jolliffe said he didn't think any color system is ready yet, but that RCA's system is more nearly ready than the others.

Pinned down, Sarnoff said that even if defense measures didn't cut down on civilian production and there are no other in factors interfering with production, it would still take a "minimum of a year" to get the tubes in production and probably two years to get them into quantity production.

OF THE RCA COLOR SETS shown, three were built as color sets, one was converted from a regular black and white set by substituting a color tube for a black and white and adding a few circuits and a small shelf of additional material at the back. Another set, a "slave" or companion set, housed only the components needed for color and received its major transmission information from the black and white set to which it was connected by wire. Jolliffe estimated that the converted and companion sets, which seemed somewhat less bright than the others, operated at 75 percent of the efficiency of a custom-built color set. Both Jolliffe and Sarnoff said that no color convertor for any system would be more than 75 percent effective.

Although no specific estimate of cost was made by RCA, Jolliffe stated that the RCA tri-color tube conversion could be made as cheaply as any other kind of conversion—a reference to the color wheel conversions proposed by CBS.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Carrying a Good Idea Too Far

Jay Aitch isn't the only District Liner to get an article in this month's "Magazine Digest." Henry F. Unger of 4930 South Dakota ave. ne., made it, too.

Henry sends along an unfinished story that will probably seem funny to everybody except the woman it happened to.

A local church group was packing big boxes of clothing for overseas relief. When they were all through for the night, the lady discovered that her coat was missing.

Unfortunately, Henry didn't stay to find out how the story ended.

'TWAS EVER THUS

Marjory Hendricks, owner of Normandy Farm, went to great pains to supply proper sleeping accommodations for her pets.

She bought them antique cradles, and padded them down all nice and comfy.

So what happened? The cocker spaniel prefers the top of a bookcase, and the cat sleeps on a strictly forbidden needlepoint chair.

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Post Reporter John Ball got a call from the Commerce Department recently. His caller wanted some information about prices the Agriculture Department had quoted to foreign governments for American foodstuffs.

"For example, we'd like to know what Agricuture was asking for these things in June of this year."

"Well, gee whiz," John replied, "I could look it up, I guess, but why don't you ask Agriculture?"

"We did," said the tired voice at the other end, "but they wouldn't tell us."

MISCELLANY

A Washington Post reporter just back from Ohio says that the reason Cleveland's municipally owned snow plows were a day late getting into action after the big storm was that nobody had remembered to put antifreeze in them . . . Wayne Coy, chairman of the FCC, is bushed after listening to months of arguments on the color TV controversy, and plans to take a vacation. "Are you going home to Indiana for a visit, or staying here?" I asked. "I don't know exactly where I'm going," Coy replied, "but you can bet it'll be somewhere that's warmer than Washington, Ind., or Washington, D. C." . . . Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Olman of Fairfax Village suggest that the ideal vacation spot is Clearwater Beach, Fla. They've been down there since Thanksgiving Day, the lucky stiffs . . . Art Cross of the Atlas Club informs me that a ping pong set and other recreational equipment is en route to the Industrial Home School at Blue Plains, in response to a recent item here . . . Olive T. Kephart of 135 Carroll ave., Takoma Park, Md., tells me that the Amicitia Club of the YWCA is collecting baby walkers, playpens and wheeled toys for the kids at the Industrial Home School Annex, 5200 Loughborough rd. nw., and anybody who has something to contribute may call Sligo 6370 for pickup service . . . Fifth-grader Richard Weissberg of 3500 14th st. nw. wants you to know that the Raymond School (10th and Spring rd. nw.) is holding its annual school luncheon at noon today and you're all invited. The money goes to buy equipment for the kids. And I want you to know that Richard writes a neater hand than I do . . . Conrad "Old Man" Reid of 6703 Connecticut ave., Chevy Chase, Md., sounds as if he's over the long illness that put a crimp in his correspondence to this column. Currently he growls: "Can't you list Harry Wismer in your Give-Aways?" . . . Myra L. Platshon of 1316 Park rd. nw. tells me that about 20 of her sisters in Kappa Sigma Tau between the ages of 15 and 20 want a worthwhile project on which they can spend some of their spare time. They might contact the Handicapped Coral Ensemble at 1135 Morse st. ne., which desperately needs a sewing machine and hand loom to help blind folks become self-supporting . . . Mattie S. Fry of the American Legion Auxiliary invites you all to join the fun at Turner's Arena Friday night. There'll be a Variety and Talent show for the benefit of the Childrens Country Home for Convalescent Children, 18th and Bunker Hill rd. ne. The time is 7:30, and tickets are only $1, half price for children . . . Bob Haas of 2963 McKinley st. nw. says: "Transit Radio may not be playing be-bop music, but they're certainly coming close to it with their variations of such classics as Brahms' Hungarian Dances" . . . Parking lot operator M. E. Edlavitch, back from a visit to the West Coast, reports that most merchants out there have arrangements with nearby lots and garages permitting customers to park free. "The payoff," he says, "was a shoe shine parlor that advertised a free parking deal."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Attlee Has Democratic Manner

By Drew Pearson

The Right Honorable Clement Attlee, now Prime Minister of Britain, once served a brief term as dishwasher in the United States.

Attlee

It happened during the United Nations Conference in San Francisco in 1945, when Attlee was Deputy Prime Minister.

Attlee had received a letter from a San Francisco printer, Joseph Collier, who 30 years before had known Attlee when both were members of the same Labor Party club on the outskirts of London. (Attlee was then a social worker.) So Collier invited Attlee to dine at his working-class home in San Francisco. The No. 2 man of England accepted the invitation with pleasure, ate a huge meal, then asked who was going to do the dishes.

"Why, I will do them later, myself," replied Mrs. Collier.

At this the Deputy Prime Minister of England went into the kitchen, put on an apron, and, while the Colliers wiped, Attlee washed the dishes.

British vs. MacArthur

For about five days before Prime Minister Attlee's arrival in Washington, the State Department was deluged with cables and official visits from North Atlantic Pact ambassadors asking where General MacArthur was leading the United Nations and whether he alone was deciding when and how the western world should declare war on China.

Reason for the alarm was not only the tragically precarious position of U. N. troops in Korea, but because Allied diplomats knew what the American public didn't—namely, that on three specific occasions the British made proposals for avoiding a clash with China.

1. First the British urged that MacArthur halt U. N. forces on the thirty-eighth parallel.

2. When this was overruled, the British proposed that MacArthur halt his army about 40 miles away from the Manchurian border. This proposal was laid before MacArthur at Wake Island and supposedly accepted.

3. The British proposed that no move be made to bomb Chinese bases inside Manchuria.

MacArthur's opposition to these proposals is why Prime Minister Attlee faced the revolt of about 100 Labor members of Parliament.

Gen. Bradley's View

Officials admit that General MacArthur at times overreached his authority, but are inclined to blame kindly Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, for not being tougher with his friend in Tokyo.

What happened was that MacArthur would cable the Joint Chiefs of Staff, demanding that he be allowed to override Washington instructions. Couched in MacArthur's vigorous, sizzling language, his messages usually predicted dire consequences if his ideas were not followed. So, after some sputtering among the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Bradley usually concluded that the commander in the field should be permitted to make the final decision.

"General MacArthur knows the situation better than we do over here," kindly General Bradley would tell the President. And Truman, not the forceful military strategist Roosevelt was, invariably gave his O. K.

However, Bradley, an honest man as well as a great soldier, didn't attempt to cover up mistakes in Korea when he conferred at the White House with the President, Cabinet chiefs, and Congressional leaders last week.

Despite slanted news reports that MacArthur was acting under "instructions" from Washington when he led U. N. troops into the Chinese Communist trap, Bradley candidly admitted that MacArthur was "on his own, like any field general under the circumstances."

Bradley also reported that he "couldn't understand" why MacArthur was unprepared for the Chinese Communist invasion of Korea, inasmuch as the Communists were massing an army of 500,000 troops on the Manchurian border for two weeks before the attack.

"They didn't know the Chinese were massing in such numbers," replied Bradley, somewhat grimly.

Bradley also admitted, under questioning by Connally, that for some time prior to the Communist attack, large segments of U. N. forces were divided by the mountain range dissecting the Korean peninsula, with little or no liaison.

Significantly, GOP Senator Alexander Wiley and other friends of MacArthur at the meeting didn't open their mouths to defend him.

As the meeting broke up, GOP Representative Dewey Short of Missouri told Secretary of State Dean Acheson that this is not the time to use the A-bomb.

"We should save it for the Russians, not drop it on her satellites," declared Short.

Democratic Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, also objected to dropping the bomb in Korea or China, asserting it would be a tragic mistake that might turn the whole world against us and further diminish the waning hopes of restoring world peace.

NOTE—Secretary Acheson has scrupulously refrained from any criticism of MacArthur at any closed-door sessions with Congress or elsewhere.
